Doctors up-in-arms at Hurvitz 'sadism' label

Jerusalem Post Staff

Finance Minister Yigael Hurvitz last night said that he would not retract his charge of "sadism" against doctors who impose sanctions, which he hurled during a television interview on Wednesday night.

Yesterday the president of the Israel Medical Association, Dr. Yitzhak Rami Yishay, cabled Hurvitz with a formal request that he apologize for using the offensive term during his appearance on the Moked programme.

"The doctors are boiling mad at Hurvitz' choice of words," the head of the staff committee representing the 350 doctors at Tel Hashomer hospital told The Jerusalem Post yesterday.

"If he doesn't apologize, we will call a real strike," warned Dr. Zvi Rotstein.

Leaving Jewish consciousness in the hands of Cummings and others would be a major setback to the new president and the Jewish community, demonstrated in the course of the week that it is not within the Democratic Party.

Nationwide, Jews voted overwhelmingly for Carter and Reagan — 45 per cent each — with Independent candidate John Anderson getting some 20 per cent. For the Jewish community, this was a watershed since it demonstrated that the Democratic Party could no longer take the Jewish vote for granted. It also convinced many Republicans that wooing Jews can be worthwhile.

Many of Reagan's key advisers came from the grass-roots religious Orthodox community in Brooklyn who approved of Reagan's opposition to such issues as abortion, the Equal Rights Amendment, gay rights, etc. The neo-conservatives, like Irving Kristol, who pushed for a more aggressive, apparently heading for this border defence posture; and American Jews who campaigned for that Carter was a friend of Israel and America and Israel.

IF THE REPUBLICANS are smart, they will capitalize on this success. Their new Jewish supporters may be brought into the political process at the grass-roots level, the traditional "Eastern European Jewish leadership, but they may wind up permanent Republican supporters — breaking the historic pattern of Jewish support for the Democrats.

In any case, an effort must be made to avoid falling into the trap of dealing only through a small number — of "Jewish leaders," no matter how individually committed he or they may be. The ghetto mentality may have served Jewish interests in earlier times, but it should now be left to the history books.

before making a decision. Hurvitz had maintained that the doctors really want to strike for wage increases, and that the I.M.A.'s threatened action was a pretext," But he would not give in, Hurvitz declared.

In his telegram to Hurvitz, Dr. Yishay said that the minister's use of the term "sadism" was libellous, and that if Hurvitz did not apologize the I.M.A. would ask the attorney-general either to institute criminal proceedings or to allow the I.M.A. to do so.

The I.M.A. also warned Hurvitz that it would ask the attorney-general to deprive the minister of his immunity as an MK.

Meanwhile, the State Attorney's office yesterday asked the Jerusalem District Labour Court to order that doctors who apply sanctions in six Dan Region hospitals be docked half their salaries.

On Wednesday, the court had ruled that such sanctions constitute an illegal strike and issued an injunction ordering doctors to go back at midnight to a regular working schedule. The law provides that an employer may also withhold overtime and other payments from workers who strike illegally.

During a visit yesterday by Health Minister Eliezer Shostak to Tel Hashomer hospital, doctors' works committee chairman Dr. Rotstein declared, "If you cut our pay by 50 per cent, we will only work half a day."

But Shostak also rejected wage demands that go beyond the government's policy.

The present conflict began last Thursday when sporadic wild-cat sanctions broke out in hospitals and in Kupat Holim clinics. The sanctions were supposedly ended that night by an injunction issued by the Jerusalem court.

The labour court renewed its injunction last Monday night and again on Wednesday night. But the

Sadat rebuffs Reagan on Hussein joining talks

By ANAN SAFADI
Post Mideast Affairs Editor

ISMAILIYA. — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat views as detrimental to Middle East peace prospects the suggestion by U.S. President-elect Ronald Reagan that Jordan's King Hussein be given a key role in the process at this juncture.

"Yes, yes, there is a contradiction between my position and that of Mr. Reagan" with regard to Jordan's role, Sadat said in an exclusive interview with The Jerusalem Post.

The Egyptian leader said that Jordan should have no place in the current peace-making efforts until Egypt, Israel and the U.S. wrap up an agreement on the projected autonomy scheme for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

"Now you write this down," Sadat said emphatically: "I refuse the incorporation of King Hussein" in the peace negotiations at this stage.

Sadat said that the immediate target should be a tripartite summit between Egypt, Israel and the U.S. to be aimed at "political directives" for their autonomy negotiators.

He said that the prime mission of the three countries is to agree on broad lines answering controversial questions in the autonomy scheme "to help negotiating ministers wind up an accord within hours."

The Egyptian president granted this paper the interview at his Suez Canal resthouse here on the eve of the third anniversary of his epoch-making peace voyage to Jerusalem. He sat on the lawn of the Camp David-like solitary retreat, counting the gains his initiative has scored as a result of the peace he concluded with Israel.

"It's something of a legend," he said with evident pride. "Who could believe three years ago that we would in such a short period tear down barriers, exchange ambassadors and establish normalization of relations," he said, while stressing "that the October war (of 1973) was indeed going to be the last of wars.

"Isn't it a dream that there shall be no more wars to victimize humans or destroy property?" he asked, looking around across the tall pine trees and into the calm waters of the Suez Canal.

He said that "everything, everything that is happening" in the region proves how right he was to have taken the peace option. "And all that is being witnessed should serve as an incentive to consolidate the peace process."

"The issue now is not whether King Hussein should join the peace process," Sadat said pointedly. It is that of confronting the threats to peace, including those of the Soviets "and people like Saddam Hussein (of Iraq), who is handling his Russian weaponry like a child fiddling with toys. It's that of Syria and the likes of those."

He indicated rather strongly his discomfort over the fact that Reagan does not seem to see eye-to-

IDF kills two terrorists near kibbutz Misgav Am

Jerusalem Post Reporter and Agencies

MISGAV AM. — Two terrorists were killed by an IDF patrol early yesterday morning when they tried to breach the security fence on the Lebanese border less than two kilometres from here. They were apparently heading for this border kibbutz, site of last April's attack, in which a soldier, a child and a kibbutz member were killed along with five terrorists.

The terrorists, who both appeared about twenty years old, passed through the territory held by UNIFIL on their way to the border.

They were killed on the Lebanese side of the security fence. One died immediately, the second a short time later. Two Kalashnikov assault rifles, nine magazines (two of them spent), explosives, a camera, and a knapsack were found on their bodies. The bodies bore identification indicating that the terrorists were members of Naif Hawatme's Democratic Front.

This organization was responsible for the January 1979 attack on the rest house in Maalot.

A readiness alert was announced in all the border settlements as soon as the terrorists' bodies were discovered. But life continued as usual in Misgav Am and the other settlements both during the previous night, when firing beyond the border was heard, and after the alert was sounded.

Hungarians and Czechs back union-gov't talks in Poland

WARSAW (UPI). — The leaders of Czechoslovakia and Hungary issued a guarded endorsement of the Polish government's effort to negotiate with the country's rebellious new trade union, as a pro-government Polish Catholic paper called for moral support from Poland's Eastern Bloc allies.

The newspaper Slowo Powszechne called on the East Bloc to lend moral support as well as much-needed material aid to Poland during this difficult time of transition.

This appeal came on the heels of a joint communique by Czechoslovak leader Gustav Husak and Hungarian leader Janos Kadar following their meeting in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, on Wednesday.

In the communique, they expressed their support for the efforts of the Polish Communist Party toward "solving the current problems."

Poland seeks $3b. emergency U.S. aid

WASHINGTON (AP). — The Polish government, faced with paying off a huge foreign debt, failing production, labour unrest and chronic shortages, has asked the U.S. for $3b. in emergency aid, U.S. officials said yesterday.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said nothing of that magnitude is being considered, primarily because of budgetary restraints.

The Polish request was taken up at a top-level White House meeting three weeks ago but a decision was put off pending future discussions, according to the officials.

Begin and Carter declare at farewell meeting:

Peace process must go on

By WOLF BLITZER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent and Agencies

DETROIT. — Prime Minister Menahem Begin arrived here last night from Washington, where he and President Jimmy Carter agreed that the Camp David accords must be "fully honoured, irrespective of any change in governments."

Begin, who flew here to address the Council of Jewish Federations general assembly, received the strongest declaration to date from Carter affirming Israel's strategic value to the U.S.

Carter, who accompanied Begin to his waiting limousine following their discussions at the White House, insisted that the Camp David agreements "must continue," adding that U.S. support for Israel will continue to remain "unshakeable."

Begin praised Carter for his "gracious acceptance" of election defeat, and said it would be an example for others to follow.

Aboard the U.S. Air Force plane which Carter made available for Begin's flight to Detroit, the prime minister appeared clearly pleased by his discussion in Washington with Carter, Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, special Middle East envoy Sol Linowitz, members of the House of Representatives and Senate and other influential Americans.

Meeting with Israeli reporters, Begin insisted that no final decision had yet been reached regarding a three-way summit with Carter and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. Other Israeli sources expressed doubt that any such session would take place before Carter leaves office on January 20, although it was not yet clear whether Sadat had finally decided against a summit.

Asked on Wednesday about the possibility Carter replied that if the upcoming autonomy negotiations are successful, "there would be a possibility — unlikely possibility — that a summit would take place prior to the inauguration. I doubt that this would be the case."

Israel is prepared for any meeting which the other parties would consider helpful in advancing the peace process, Israeli officials said aboard Begin's Air Force aircraft.

Begin was pleased that the three-way autonomy negotiations would convene on November 17 at Giza in Egypt, as originally scheduled. There are no immediate plans for Linowitz to return to Israel or Egypt before the Reagan administration takes over.

Despite the many rough moments in the peace negotiations, both Carter and Begin appeared genuinely moved during what officials later said was probably their farewell get-together with Carter as president.

Without saying so specifically, each leader also appeared to signal his concern that the Reagan administration might move away from the Camp David track.

But it was with that in mind that both Carter and Begin stressed the continuity of the peace process — Begin referred to it as a "sacred trust" — irrespective of any particular government in power.

Asked if unilateral declarations by Carter could be binding on later presidents of the U.S., White House spokesman Jody Powell said, "No, of course not, but when heads of government sign documents and reach agreements, even when they're not ratified by the Senate, they are generally considered to be commitments on the part of the nation."

Carter was in a reminiscing mood as he spoke about his efforts for a Middle East peace, and reflected on the few weeks he had left in office. "It has been one of the most difficult and time-consuming, but one of the most gratifying experiences I have had as president," he said.

Activist Victor Brailovsky arrested in Moscow flat

MOSCOW (UPI). — Prominent Jewish activist Viktor Brailovsky was arrested here yesterday and taken to an undisclosed destination, his wife Irina said.

As he was taken away, the 44-year-old cybernetician gave her the message that he was charged with spreading anti-Soviet propaganda, forbidden under the catch-all Article 190-1 of the Soviet penal code.

Brailovsky was famous as editor of the underground, or samizdat, publication Jews in the USSR, and for the Sunday morning seminars he held in his apartment for Jews unable to pursue their scientific professions, having lost their jobs after applying for emigration visas.

Last Tuesday, he gave a press conference announcing a three-day hunger strike by more than 200 Jews denied emigration papers which was timed to coincide with the Madrid Conference on European Security and Cooperation.

Brailovsky and his wife have waited eight years for their visas, and were last told in June that their application had been refused again because Irina was a security risk.

Michal Yudelman adds from Tel Aviv:

Some 30 friends and relatives of the 300 Jewish refuseniks currently on a hunger strike in the Soviet Union yesterday demonstrated outside the Finnish Embassy on Rehov Hayarkon here.

The demonstrators protested the refusal of Soviet authorities to allow the Jews to emigrate to Israel, and called upon Soviet president Leonid Brezhnev and the countries participating in the Madrid conference to support their cause.

A Finnish Embassy official said that the demonstrators had come to the wrong address for their protest. "We only represent Soviet interests in Israel, not Israeli interests. We have repeatedly told them over the past 10 years not to demonstrate here, but they apparently have this need to do it," the official said.

The demonstration dispersed quietly at about noon.

Questions raised in death of patients at Beilinson

Jerusalem Post Staff

PETAH TIKVA. — An element of doubt was raised yesterday over the death of two patients who were undergoing routine tests for diabetes at Beilinson Hospital here on Tuesday.

Police told the Magistrates Court here, during a hearing yesterday in which the nurse believed responsible was released on bail, that the deaths came from drinking highly poisonous formalin — a formaldehyde solution commonly used in the hospital as a disinfectant.

But leading pharmacists told The Jerusalem Post last night that they could not understand how such an accident could have taken place.

According to police, the nurse apparently gave the two patients 100 grams of sugar and lemon juice dissolved in formalin. The lemon juice and sugar should have been dissolved in water for the patients' sugar tolerance test.

The 39-year-old nurse, publication of whose name or picture was forbidden by the court, was released on IS2,500 bail yesterday by Magistrate Arye Graf. She was also ordered to surrender her passport to police.

Police told the court they had finished interrogating her.

They said the lethal drink was given to Yosef Shimelman, 47, of Kibbutz Ein Zurim and Natan Starosta, 39 of Rishon Lexion. Starosta, an electronic engineer at Elco, was married and had a 10-year-old daughter. Shimelman, who worked at the kibbutz factory, immigrated from Argentina 15 years ago and also leaves a wife and daughter.

Five to ten minutes after the men drank the solution, both were dead of what was described as cardiac arrest.

Edmund Bass, chairman of the private pharmacists' association, told The Post last night he was astounded to learn the patients could possibly have drunk the mixture. Normally, he said, the taste of the first small sip would warn a person something was wrong.

"You can camouflage the smell by using lemon juice, but you cannot hide the taste in any manner," he said.

He also questioned the preparation of such solutions by a nurse.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

At this week's meeting of the Weizmann Institute's Board of Governors, held under the chairmanship of Lord Sieff of Brimpton, there were ceremonies marking the establishment of the K.B. Weissman Institute of Physical Sciences, the Melvyn A. Dobrin Centre for Nutrition and Plant Research, and the Marian and Joseph Robbins Chair in Biorheology. Honorary doctorates were awarded to Prof. Rudolf M. Bloch, Morris L. Levinson, Prof. Ephraim Urbach and Dr. Veit Wyler.

MK Yigal Cohen-Orgad will speak on current economics, at the Haifa Engineers Forum, 1 p.m. today.

The Rambam Society, friends of the Rambam Medical Centre, will hold a special 20th anniversary dinner tomorrow at the Dan Carmel Hotel, Haifa. The society since 1960 has channelled millions of shekels to the hospital to purchase equipment, build larger operating rooms and set up larger and more convenient infirmaries.

The Hebrew University religious students group, Motza, will hold a discussion on "Is Israel the Jewish State?" at Hechal Shlomo, fifth floor, at 7.30 p.m. Saturday. Guest speakers include MK Zerah Warhaftig, Prof. Y. Liebowitz, and Prof. C. Klein. There will be music and refreshments.

An Oneg Shabbat will be held at 9 tonight at Ihud Shivat Zion, 80 Ben Yehuda Street, Tel Aviv. Tourists are invited to meet Dr. Israel Dishon, Israeli scientist, and Dr. Yehudit Dishon, Bar-Ilan University.

Sen. Ribicoff's niece killed by LA robbers

LOS ANGELES (UPI). — The niece of Senator Abraham Ribicoff, Republican of Connecticut, was shot dead during a robbery Wednesday night as she left a restaurant here.

Sarai Ribicoff, 23, an editorial writer for the The Los Angeles Herald Examiner, was described by her boss as "one of the brightest people" on the newspaper staff.

Ribicoff and her male companion were leaving the restaurant when they were accosted by two men who demanded their money. They handed over their wallets, but then the gunmen, apparently without provocation, opened fire. Ribicoff's companion was not injured.

Javits reportedly wants UN position

NEW YORK. — Senator Jacob Javits has declined overtures to become ambassador to Israel, hoping instead to become the U.S. envoy to the UN, the New York Daily News reported yesterday.

Javits had a "general discussion" about the UN post with President-elect Ronald Reagan when they both campaigned in Arizona. A spokesman for Javits, who lost his bid for re-election to the U.S. senate, refused to comment about the story.

RUGBY — A National Rugby League game postponed from last month will be played at Ha'ogen at 2 p.m. tomorrow between the Kibbutz XV and Tel Aviv ASA "B".

Municipalities to raise taxes by 50% — 155%

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Union of Local Authorities yesterday decided to raise municipal taxes by between 50 and 155 per cent higher than the taxes levied last January.

The decision came at a stormy meeting of the union executive, when the union approved a compromise agreement with the Finance Ministry.

According to the compromise, the ministry will give the municipalities IS300 million, partly as a grant and partly as a long-term loan to cover their financial deficit. The municipalities agreed to save IS300m. by cutting their budgets and increasing their revenues, including the municipal taxes, it was reported.

Each local authority will raise its taxes according to its need; up to 155 per cent by the end of the year or up to a sum to increase its revenue four times its income during the budgetary year of 1978-79.

Most executive members doubted their ability to raise taxes by such large amounts by the end of the year. But they agreed to the decision, as part of the compromise with the ministry, as "the lesser of the two evils."

The Union of Local Authorities also demanded that the various ministries transfer their respective funds to the authorities on time every month, as well as make similar budget cuts and adopt efficiency measures of their own.

Garbage piles up in Tel Aviv

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Piles of garbage loomed larger than ever on city streets here yesterday when the garbage collectors refused to return to work until they were assured of pay for the three days they struck earlier in the week.

Theodore Kaufman, municipal employees union head, said yesterday that the collectors would resume work today. However, the garbage collectors had rejected Kaufman's call to resume work yesterday.

An executive meeting of the municipality on Sunday will discuss the issue of paying all the municipal employees for their three days of strike. City workers returned to work after their October salaries were deposited in their bank accounts.

The municipality yesterday began hiring private contractors to clear away the garbage. But there was no noticeable reduction in the piles on streets and in parking lots, which were virtually turned into city dumps by the strike.

Residents, meanwhile, have been asked to place their trash in plastic bags and deposit them in the garbage bins.

Maneuvers marred by fatal plane crash

1,400 U.S. soldiers arrive for joint exercises in Egypt

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

CAIRO. — More American troops arrived yesterday for joint training in desert warfare with Egyptian forces in the final phase of a two-day airlift clouded by a U.S. transport plane crash that killed all 13 aboard.

A total of 1,400 troops of the 101st Airborne Division, based at Fort Campbell, Kentucky, are taking part in the exercise, code-named "Bright Star." The 101st is part of the U.S.'s new "Rapid Deployment Force." RDF commander Gen. Paul Kelly is in Egypt for the exercises.

The Americans hope to experience at firsthand the geographical and climatic conditions they might encounter elsewhere in the Middle East and the Gulf, if need be.

Lack of experience in such conditions was cited as a major reason for the failure of the attempt to rescue the hostages from the U.S. Embassy in Teheran.

Egyptian forces, still largely equipped with Soviet weapons and trained along Soviet lines, hope to pick up practical tips on fighting techniques during the joint exercises.

In the fatal accident, all 13 people aboard a U.S. Air Force C-141 transport plane were killed when it crashed at 11.50 p.m. Wednesday, a U.S. embassy spokesman in Cairo said yesterday.

The plane was making its final landing approach to Cairo West, a desert airbase north of Cairo. It was carrying six crew members and seven passengers.

This was the second fatal accident involving a U.S. Air Force plane in Egypt within three months. On August 16, a Phantom on joint maneuvers with the Egyptian air force crashed, killing both crewmen.

The current joint exercise will include air assaults, daylight attacks and night attacks. Live ammunition will be used at certain stages.

The exercise will end on November 22.

TA Maccabi beat Crystal Palace

By MICHAEL WADE
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

LONDON. — Playing without Earl Williams, who was built up as a bogey-man by the press here, Tel Aviv Maccabi beat Crystal Palace 83-75 last night in a European Cup for Champions game.

The win puts Maccabi in the finals of the European Cup.

Maccabi began confidently, and took an early lead, but Crystal Palace took advantage of mid-court lapses to narrow the gap three times in the first half.

In an exciting final two minutes of the first half the locals managed to tie Maccabi 43-43, at the break.

Afterwards it was Aulcie Perry's game. Perry dominated events and attacked, and despite wonderful play by 1.73-metre American Elton Byrd, Crystal Palace had no answer to Perry.

With 14 minutes to go, Crystal Palace took the lead at 53-52. But Maccabi called time out a minute later, then went ahead, built up a commanding lead, and slowed the game to their own tempo.

Williams and Motti Arouesti were barred from the game by the FIBA for assaulting Greek players in a recent game in Tel Aviv.

In Korac Cup play yesterday in Venice, Carrera Venice (Italy) beat Haifa Hapoel, 100-80. Halftime score was 44-43.

In a Korac Cup game in Tel Aviv last night, Tel Aviv Hapoel beat Yenisehir Ankara 127:64 after 70:31 at half time.

Sela re-elected president of Weizmann Institute

Jerusalem Post Reporter

REHOVOT.—Professor Michael Sela was unanimously elected to a second five-year term as president of the Weizmann Institute of Science at its 31st annual board meeting, chaired by Lord Sieff, which closed yesterday at the institute's campus here.

Also re-elected were Deputy Chairman Ernst Japhet of Tel Aviv and Stephen Stulman of New York. Japhet was chosen again to serve as chairman of the board's executive council, while Dr. Zvi Dinstein of Tel Aviv was re-elected treasurer.

On Wednesday, honorary doctorates were awarded to: Prof. Rudolf Bloch, a pioneer in the exploitation of Dead Sea chemicals; Morris Levinson, chairman of the board of governors of the institute's American committee; Prof. Ephraim Urbach, a noted Talmud scholar who is president of the Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities; and Dr. Veit Wyler, who is prominent in the Swiss Jewish community and in the Weizmann Institute's European committee.

The association told the Jerusalem labour court that it neither ordered nor organized sanctions, and that it had issued a directive to cease sanctions "if any are in effect."

The State Attorney's office was yesterday said to be determined to go to court again to ask for the docking of wages if sanctions spread from the Dan Region to other hospitals.

But doctors at the Mount Scopus branch of Jerusalem's Hadassah Hospital, yesterday continued the policy they adopted on Wednesday, in imitation of their Dan Region colleagues, and worked according to rule. The doctors at Hadassah's Ein Karem hospital remained undecided.

The management of Jerusalem's Shaare Zedek hospital yesterday reported that there was no undue pressure. No new developments were expected at this morning's weekly staff meeting.

Normally, Bass said, a person would quickly regurgitate formalin, although "if he swallowed a mouthful, his stomach and esophagus would be so burned that he might not be able to regurgitate it."

A second veteran pharmacist, who declined to be identified, agreed with Bass' analysis. "It is incredible that any man could drink an entire glass of formalin," he said, "although he might swallow a tablespoon before beginning to vomit." The pharmacists said a lethal dose consists of about 50 cc. to 60 cc. of a 40 per cent solution, the strength normally used by hospitals in disinfectants. Hospitals also occasionally dilute that to about 10 per cent strength, and it could not be learned what strength solution the two men were given. Both bodies were sent to the Institute of Forensic Medicine for autopsies, but results of the autopsies were not presented to the court, nor could it be learned if those findings were yet complete. The pharmacists also said that while formalin can kill within a few minutes, if an antidote is immediately administered the person's life can often be saved.

Meanwhile, both Kupat Holim and the Ministry of Health said yesterday that their investigations into the incident were proceeding at full speed and would soon be completed.

A protest by residents of Jerusalem's Musrara quarter over the shooting of a local 17-year-old turned into a violent demonstration yesterday, in which three policemen were injured and one police car destroyed. One 18-year-old demonstrator was arrested.

Yesterday afternoon's disturbance began when a group of about 50 Musrara residents, led by MKs Charlie Biton and Sa'adia Marciano — who both grew up in the neighbourhood — held a demonstration on Rehov Ayin-Het, the main street in the neighbourhood.

The demonstration was called after a pre-dawn incident yesterday involving some teenagers suspected of stealing a car, which ended with the shooting of one of them.

The youth is in good condition in the orthopedic ward at Hadassah Hospital on Mt. Scopus. He was wounded in the leg, witnesses said, after he was already handcuffed by plainclothesmen who chased the youths into the neighbourhood.

The Southern District's acting commander Tat-Nitzav Yehoshua Caspi, has ordered an investigation into the shooting. According to a police spokesman, the officer involved has not been temporarily suspended, nor has his weapon been taken away from him while the investigation is under way.

Not since the early 1970s, when Musrara gave birth to the Black Panthers, led by Biton and Marciano, has there been such violence in the neighbourhood.

The angry demonstrators blocked traffic on Rehov Hanevi'im, attracting a police car to the scene at about 5 p.m. The teenagers quickly surrounded the car and eventually turned it over, setting it alight. The two officers inside escaped unharmed.

Stone throwing and tire burning quickly forced police to send in units of baton-weilding border police but, hard-pressed in dispersing the crowd, they resorted to throwing stones back at the demonstrators. By then, more than 100 youths were involved.

For nearly two hours, the night air was bright with the flames of burning tires and flaming trash bins. From rooftops, adult and young residents alike cursed police, who ran up and down the streets of the neighbourhood trying to disperse the crowd. Finally, at around 7.30 p.m., a combination of police action and Marciano's and Biton's efforts to calm the situation succeeded in returning peace to the streets.

Biton last night denied that the two MKs had incited violence. He said that they were asked by the neighbourhood committee to attend what was scheduled to be a brief protest march.

'Peace' on Ramot road

Top police officers in Jerusalem met yesterday with leaders of the ultra-Orthodox Eda Haredit and have apparently reached an agreement that the leaders will try to prevent violence at the Ramot road tomorrow.

According to national police spokesman Arye Arad, the rabbis told the policemen they would do "all that is possible" to keep the peace on the controversial road.

The Eda Haredit has regularly issued such appeals, but zealots from Mea Shearim's Natoral Karta sect instigate the stone-throwing "shabbes" violence at the road on Saturdays.

Gaza terrorists get 20-year prison term

GAZA (Itim). — The Gaza military court yesterday sentenced two men to 20 years imprisonment for planting an explosive in a Gaza street and causing heavy damage to buildings in the vicinity.

The prosecution told the court that Mohammed al-Zawi, 37, and Najib el-Aloch, 28, were members of El Fatah and helped set up explosive and weapon caches in Gaza. They planted the explosive on August 28, 1979, during a military government ceremony. Both men have previous convictions for terrorist activity.

Burg has harsh words for U.S. autonomy 'compendiu

By ROBERT ROSENBERG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

U.S. autonomy negotiator James Leonard heard stiff criticism from Interior Minister Yosef Burg yesterday of what the Americans are calling a "compendium" of the Egyptian and Israeli proposals presented in September in Washington.

The meeting with Ambassador Leonard, at Tel Aviv's Dan Hotel, came four days before Interior Ministry Director-General Haim Kubersky is to meet his U.S. and Egyptian counterparts in Cairo for a resumption of the autonomy talks.

Asked what he thought of the working paper that Leonard showed him, Burg said that "in Jewish law there is a ban on shatnaz (the mixing of fibres)" — an indication that he was displeased with the way the Americans presented the two sides' positions.

There have been reports that the U.S. paper, which the American negotiators are insisting is not a new U.S. position paper, is sympathetic to Egypt th Israel.

However, an American last night said that when L showed the paper to the Egy last week in Cairo they comp about the "Israeli sympath the paper."

Socialist leaders support peace talks with Jordan

Jerusalem Post Staff

The Socialist International meeting in Madrid is expected to issue a statement tomorrow calling on Jordan to join peace negotiations in the Middle East. The expected statement will in effect constitute a carefully-worded endorsement of part of the Israel Labour Party's "Jordanian Option" plan.

According to Davar's correspondent in Madrid, Gideon Kouts, the statement was worked out in negotiations during the opening session of the International yesterday. In the document Socialist International President Willy Brandt, Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, Israel Labour Party Chairman Shimon Peres and Egyptian Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Butros Ghali call on all Arab nations and especially Jordan to enter into peace negotiations with Israel. Calling on Israel to create an atmosphere of trust and understanding, the expected statement also supports negotiations based on UN resolutions 242 and 338.

The statement is based on elements of the Camp David agreements, the Vienna Document issued by Kreisky and Brandt and talks with Peres and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, a statement issued after Per cent talks with Sadat in Egy

...ny's alternative system will ...resented in the bank's review of the monetary system which will be presented to the government in mid-December. In the meantime, it will be submitted to the Treasury and the Industry and Trade Ministry for review.

The governor wants to limit credit by giving export industries a flat discount on the prevailing interest rates in Israel and abroad.

According to the Treasury, the present system which was instituted to encourage exports actually gives most aid to those firms that export only a proportionately small part of their products.

Another figure cited by the Bank of Israel to back up its contention that credit for exports must be cut is that the current IS3-3.5b. subsidy constitutes 12-13 per cent of the added value of Israeli exports. The added value is the difference between the price of components, raw materials and other production costs excluding labour, and the price commanded by the exported product.

One of the central bank's main arguments against the current system is that it makes it hard for the bank to control the excessive amount of currency in the market. Control of credit is one of the main tools traditionally used to control inflation, and the bank's economists argue that they cannot control credit if the export credit system is not changed. The loans given to exports are now 58.7 per cent of all the credit available on the Israeli market. The Bank of Israel wants this reduced to 50 per cent

Court order bars penniless Indians from leaving Israel

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV.— The management of Tel Aviv's Ambassador Hotel yesterday obtained a court order forbidding 107 Indian nationals staying at the hotel from leaving the country, and impounding their personal belongings. The Indians have not paid their hotel bills since October 17, when their two leaders "disappeared" leaving them penniless.

One of the hotel's managers said that he was considering evicting them last night.

Beni Avisar, the hotel official, said he allowed the Indians to stay for the past few weeks because he "couldn't just throw them out into the street." During this time he said, he negotiated with the Foreign and Interior Ministries and the British Embassy in the hope of solving the problem.

But yesterday, according to Avisar, all the official bodies decided they could do nothing about the Indians.

The Indians arrived in Israel in two groups last month. They obtained visas on the pretext of wishing to study Israeli irrigation systems and meeting Agriculture Ministry officials. It was only after they were deserted that they revealed they had been promised employment in Israel, and that they had paid 15,000 rupees ($2,000) to Rajiv and Tajinder Kumar, the leaders for the trip.

The stranded Indians said they had invested their life's savings in the trip or borrowed money at 40 per cent interest, leaving their wives and children without support in India.

Israel's 'nuclear bill' stirs UN

By LEON HADAR
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

NEW YORK. — Israel's introduction yesterday of a draft resolution calling for the establishment of a nuclear weapons-free zone in the Middle East produced great interest among western and Third World delegates to the UN General Assembly.

Diplomats and journalists crowded into the hall where Ambassador Arieh Eilan introduced the resolution to the first committee. Israeli diplomats noted that in low-level discussion with Egyptian representatives, the latter reacted positively to the Israeli ideas and said they were worried by the possibility of countries like Libya and Iraq introducing nuclear weapons to the area.

The draft resolution calls upon all states of the Middle East "to convene at the earliest possible date a conference with a view to negotiating the multilateral treaty establishing a nuclear weapons-free zone in the Middle East."

Yadin: Ben-Gurion's teachings flexible

SDE BOKER (Itim). — David Ben-Gurion's disciples would be untrue to his legacy if they were to apply his words literally in all situations, Deputy Premier Yigael Yadin said here yesterday at a ceremony marking seven years since the death of Israel's first prime minister. Changed circumstances must be taken into account, he said.

Yadin was the only speaker at the graveside ceremony, which was also attended by President Yitzhak Navon, Knesset Speaker Yitzhak Berman, acting Jewish Agency executive chairman Yosef Shapiro, Chief of Staff Rav-Aluf Rafael Eitan, past and present cabinet ministers, diplomats, police officers, friends of Ben-Gurion and his wife Paula, and teachers and pupils from throughout the south. Ben-Gurion's son Amos said kaddish.

A recording of Ben-Gurion speaking on Jerusalem and the Jewish people was played.

Speaking at a dinner held after the ceremony were Chief-of-Staff Eitan and the president of the Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, Yosef Tekoah.

Five Haifa city officials held in bribe investigation

By MARY HIRSCHFELD
Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — Five city hall employees, including the operations officer of the collection department, were remanded into custody yesterday on suspicion of taking bribes for years from downtown restaurant owners and other businessmen.

Yitzhak Azulay, 40, was remanded for four days; Avraham Shitrit, 52, for three days; and Haim Berkovitz, 58, Gershon Marko, 53, and Yaacov Cohen, 59, were remanded for seven days each.

A police prosecutor said the five were only "the tip of the iceberg," and that a large number of city employees are implicated in the case.

Four of those detained were inspectors in charge of the Haifa city centre. Police said the suspects were often seen eating free meals at restaurants and accepting gifts of various kinds.

Police claimed to have 30 witnesses willing to testify that the suspects demanded and regularly received "gratuities such as imported beverages, food, and cash."

All five suspects told Magistrates Court Judge Micha Lindenstrauss they had not committed any "misdemeanor." One admitted he had "a few free lunches" at the Gat restaurant downtown, but only because of his "friendly relations" with the owner.

TA lawyer faces additional fraud charges

TEL AVIV (Itim). — A Tel Aviv attorney earlier charged with fraudulently transferring money to the Herut Party fund was yesterday also indicted for fraudulently receiving money and writing uncovered cheques.

Eliezer Pogatsh, brought to trial last Monday on the earlier charges involving the Tel Hai Fund, denied them, and at the same time convinced the District Court judge that the new charges, originally included in the first indictment, should be treated separately.

Pogatsh is charged with receiving IS30,000 from prospective buyers as first payment for a lot owned by the Ayalon company in Tel Aviv. When the buyers did not in the end win the right to purchase the lot, he stalled in returning their money, the state claims. The buyers then appealed to the firm, only to learn that it had never received the sum. Pogatsh is also said to have eventually given the buyers cheques to cover the debt — but the cheques bounced.

Inquiry into Shawwa's TV statements

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The military government is investigating a report that Gaza Mayor Rashad Shawwa said Zionism was racism during an interview on Dutch television on Wednesday evening. Shawwa has denied making the remark.

Aluf Danny Matt, the coordinator of operations in the administered territories, yesterday cancelled a scheduled meeting with Shawwa following the reports of the interview and pending the outcome of an official enquiry.

Shawwa yesterday denied saying that "Zionism is, in fact, identical to racism as was confirmed by the UN decision five years ago." The mayor reportedly also said that the Balfour Declaration was mistaken and the result of the Zionists misleading the British into thinking that Palestine was empty and had been promised to them by God.

Shawwa was interviewed during a programme largely devoted to a discussion by Israel's former ambassador to the UN, Chaim Herzog, about the UN's "Zionism is racism" decision.

Violence in taxis 'must be punished'

Two men who were sentenced to two years in prison for threatening a taxi driver with a pistol lost their appeal to have their sentences reduced when the Supreme Court ruled yesterday that violence against taxi drivers should be severely punished.

On March 3 Yehuda Asor, 22, of Kiryat Haim and Jack Marciano, 25, of Kiryat Motzkin, hired a cab driven by Amitai Ron. Once they were in it, Marciano threatened to "smash" the driver's face unless he disconnected the meter.

When Amitai demanded payment, Marciano pulled out a pistol and forced him to drive to Nahariya. At one stage the pistol changed hands and Amitai seized the opportunity to jump out of the taxi, take out his own pistol and keep the two men at bay until police arrived.

The Haifa District Court found the two men guilty of illegal possession of arms and obtaining services by means of threats. In addition to the two-year sentences, it activated suspended sentences of nine and three months against Marciano and Asor respectively.

The Supreme Court upheld the sentences because of the "violent and brutal" conduct of the appellants. (Itim)

Free-lance photographers end strike

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Thirty-seven free lance press photographers who have been on strike since the first of the month for higher pay for their pictures will resume work at noon today. Their leader, Dan Hadani, said they had decided to end the strike in order "to facilitate negotiations without pressure," with the Association of Daily Newspaper Publishers.

The photographers have been demanding IS74 per unsolicited photo submitted to newspapers. They said the fee should be linked to the cost of living index and to the price of their photographic materials. However, the publishers have only offered IS56 per picture. Prior to the strike the photographers received a standard fee of IS20.20.

The strike reportedly affected newspapers with photographers on their staff. Earlier this week, Hadani said, strikers overtook the car of a photographer on an assignment to Or Yehuda, stopping the vehicle and sitting on its hood.

When Prime Minister Menahem Begin departed for the U.S., the photographers placed their cameras on the floor along the route he took to the airplane.

Egyptian remanded by Tel Aviv court

TEL AVIV (Itim). — An Egyptian citizen charged with illegally entering Israel last September was ordered remanded into custody yesterday by a Tel Aviv District Court judge until proceedings against him are completed.

The man, Amar Abu-Ziad, 20, of Cairo is accused of pasting his picture in place of that of Israeli citizen Ibrahim Al-Hira in the latter's identity card, which Abu-Ziad allegedly found after illegally entering Israel from El-Arish. Abu-Ziad was arrested on October 19 at a roadblock by a policeman who suspected the ID card was forged.

The charge sheet said that Abu-Ziad attacked the policeman guarding his cell in the Yarkon district police station on October 28, striking him through the bars in his abdomen and eye.

Judge Uri Strosman ordered that the Egyptian Embassy in Tel Aviv be informed.

Move against Golan lobby within Labour

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Factions within the Labour Party yesterday launched a campaign to kill the Golan Heights annexation lobby within the party. A public demonstration is planned in Jerusalem next week.

In a statement published yesterday the Hug 77 segment of the party, which is composed mainly of intellectuals based in Jerusalem, called on the party's Knesset faction to vote against any legislation leading to the annexation of the Golan Heights. They claim that any such move would only weaken Israel internationally and endanger any long-term compromise to reach an overall peace agreement.

Any retention of territory, according to Labour's platform, it was argued, can only be undertaken on the basis of UN Security Council Resolution 242 and through peace negotiations.

Gulf states move to contain Iran-Iraq war

BEIRUT (AP) -Iran and Iraq reported fresh air raids, paratroop assaults and heavy artillery barrages against each other yesterday, the 54th day of the war between the two countries.

Oil-rich Arab nations of the Persian Gulf moved, meanwhile, to prevent the conflict from spilling over to other countries. Saudi Arabia, the world's largest petroleum exporter, and neighbouring Qatar declared support in separate statements for Kuwait against any external threat.

Kuwait yesterday lodged a formal protest with Iran over an aerial rocketing of a northern Kuwaiti border post at Abdali, the Kuwaiti Foreign Ministry announced.

The Kuwaiti daily newspaper Al-Siyassah said the rocket-firing incident was deliberate. It quoted military experts as saying the Iranian pilot had probably dropped the rockets in an attempt to reduce weight after his Phantom jet was hit by Iraqi forces.

A Iraqi communique broadcast by Baghdad Radio said four U.S.-made Iranian jets were shot down during raids on Um Kasr and on the towns of Panjawin, Halabja and Suleimaniyeh in northern Iraq.

Raids on Um Kasr in southernmost Iraq followed repeated air strikes by Iran on Iraq's main oil-loading terminals in the past two days.

Iran claimed it shot down one Soviet-made Iraqi fighter-bomber over Iran's main naval base of Bushehr that guards the nation's major oil-shipping island of Kharg, about 240 kilometres southwest of Um Kasr.

One Iranian tank was destroyed and one Iranian soldier killed in fighting on the northern and eastern approaches of Iran's besieged oil refining city of Abadan from Wednesday evening to yesterday morning, according to the Baghdad communique. It conceded 12 Iraqi soldiers were killed and one tank destroyed.

Iran's official Pars News Agency claimed 335 Iraqi troops were killed and 11 tanks destroyed in a massive artillery barrage in the southern sector of the 500-kilometre front overnight.

A communique from the Iranian command claimed, however, that 30 Iraqi troops were killed in the southern sector and 80 in the central sector by helicopter-borne Iranian paratroopers.

Neither side reported any major change of positions on the battlefront and no independent verification of war claims was available on either side of the border.

Iran premier sees Khomeini as aides study U.S. reply

BEIRUT. — Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, in charge of negotiations over the 52 U.S. hostages, yesterday met with revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Teheran Radio reported.

The radio said the two discussed "current events" but gave no indication whether the hostage issue or the American response to Iran's demands were mentioned.

Rajai's top aides, meanwhile, held a day-long meeting and a secretary to one of the premier's aides said, when reached by telephone from Beirut, that "they are probably discussing the American response on the hostages."

On Wednesday, Iranian sources said that the U.S. reply would be made public within two days.

Both U.S. and Iranian officials have warned that no immediate release of the hostages looks likely, and what is known of the U.S. statement indicates that it is by no means a plain and simple acceptance of the terms set by Iran's parliament.

The parliament demanded that Washington promise not to interfere in Iranian affairs, release frozen Iranian assets in American hands, scrub financial claims against Iran and return the wealth of the late shah.

U.S. officials have said the last two conditions seem to go beyond the constitutional powers of the White House. The reply is, however, expected to put forward some sort of compromise proposal on these conditions. (AP, Reuter)

E. Germany to sever most W. German cultural ties

EAST BERLIN (Reuter). — East Germany will virtually sever cultural ties with West Germany from January as the next step in its moves to freeze relations between the two states, informed sources in East Berlin said yesterday.

Singers, musicians and theatre groups were told by the cultural authorities this week that no further tours would be staged in West Germany or West Berlin after the end of this year, the sources said.

They said the only country affected by the ban would be West Germany and that tours to other Western states would continue. Visits by West German performers to the Communist state would also be halted, they added.

The performers were given no reason for the measure, but the sources said it was linked to the growing tension between the two states, whose relations sharply deteriorated last month.

Dozens of East German performers, ranging from rock groups to opera singers and classical theatre troupes, have toured West Germany each year up to now. The sources said it was not yet clear whether the ban would also apply to artists and writers.

Following the unrest in neighbouring Poland, East Germany has taken strong measures to limit contacts with West Germany, apparently because of suspicion of Western influence. Last month it sharply increased the amount of money Western visitors must change at the frontier, a move which has cut the number of West German tourists by two-thirds.

Australian official describes censored book as 'harmful'

CANBERRA (UPI). — An Australian Foreign Ministry official testified on Wednesday that publication of a book the government wants banned could harm Australia's relations with the U.S. and Indonesia.

Release of the controversial volume, Documents on Australian Defence and Foreign Policy 1968-75, could have an immediate and continuing damaging effect on Australian-American relations, Foreign Affairs Secretary Peter Henderson said.

The case is Australia's most publicized press censorship battle since World War II. The authors contend that the government is exaggerating the importance of the revelations and is trying to ban the book merely to avoid embarrassment.

The permanent ban would extend the temporary injunction the government won last Saturday restraining the Sydney Morning Herald and the Melbourne Age newspapers from publishing excerpts from the book. A later court order temporarily prohibited the sale of the 100,000-word book, but only after several hundred copies had been distributed.

The book discusses renegotiations of agreements on U.S. military bases in Australia, the presence of the Soviet navy in the Indian Ocean and Australia's support for the late Shah of Iran, among other issues.

Co-authors George Munster and John Walsh devote 26 pages to Australian-Indonesian relations over a 12-year period.

Australian-Indonesian ties have been strained in recent months. Henderson said publication of the book or parts of it could further damage relations "because it named leading Indonesian political figures still very much on the scene.

Foot leads Thatcher in UK opinion poll

LONDON (UPI). — Michael Foot, the newly elected left-wing leader of the opposition Labour Party, is already more popular than Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, according to a British poll published yesterday.

Foot received 44 per cent approval to Thatcher's 39 per cent when Britons were asked which of the two would make the better prime minister in a poll conducted for London's New Standard. The remainder were undecided.

The poll also showed that Labour continues to hold a 9 per cent edge over the Conservatives (47 to 38) with voters, while the Liberal Party has 13 per cent, and two per cent are undecided.

Thatcher's image with the British also took a dive. Fifty per cent of those polled said they thought she is "out of touch with ordinary people," 44 per cent thought she "talks down to people," 23 per cent thought she is "narrow-minded" and 59 per cent said they were disappointed with the way she is doing her job.

Strong U.S. condemnation of Soviets at Madrid meet

MADRID. — The U.S., in a forthright speech at the European Security Conference yesterday, blasted the Soviet Union for its invasion of Afghanistan and "brutal repression" of human rights.

Former attorney-general Griffin Bell, the U.S. delegation leader, told the 35-nation meeting the Afghan occupation was the most blatant violation of the 1975 Helsinki accords.

"The Soviet invasion cast a dark shadow over East-West relations which no meeting, no pronouncement, nothing in fact but the total withdrawal of Soviet troops, can dispel," Bell said.

Winning prolonged applause from all but Communist delegates when he concluded, Bell catalogued all those Soviet citizens imprisoned or exiled for trying to monitor Moscow's implementation of the Helsinki agreement.

"The reaction of the Soviet authorities was to subject these brave people to brutal repression," he said.

But Bell said there were some bright spots in the East European record, including efforts by Rumania, East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Bulgaria to resolve cases of family reunification, and by Hungary, East Germany and Poland to improve church-state relations.

But, he pointed out, Jews were harassed in the Soviet Union and denied exit permits and East Germany had raised currency exchange requirements for visitors, drastically reducing visits to families and friends by West Germans.

Soviet chief delegate Leonid Ilyichev was to have spoken right after Bell, but withdrew at the last minute to consult with Moscow.

Also in Madrid, Socialist International President Willy Brandt opened the organization's 15th congress yesterday with an address full of concern for the future of the world amid current East-West and North-South tensions.

Delegates and observers from socialist and labour parties in more than 50 countries are attending the four-day congress, which will chart the organization's role in the next decade.

Brandt was later elected president of the organization for a third two-year term. He urged participants in the European Security Conference to overcome their differences and concentrate on human rights. (Reuter, UPI)

Hijacker surrenders after holding hostages 18 hours

BUENOS AIRES (UPI). — An armed hijacker surrendered early yesterday, ending an 18-hour ordeal in which one person was shot while he held five people hostage and threatened to blow up a Uruguayan airliner in a desperate bid to be flown to Algeria.

An air force communique said Orlando Castro, 21, a Uruguayan allegedly suffering from mental problems, turned himself in at 2.45 a.m.

Airport sources said Pedro Frassia, an uncle of the hijacker, early yesterday went aboard the aging Convair Arco Airlines two-motor plane that Castro had hijacked during a flight between Colonia, Uruguay and Buenos Aires. The sources said the uncle convinced Castro to release his five hostages and turn himself in.

Castro had released 37 of the plane's 39 passengers after the hijacked plane landed at Buenos Aires on Wednesday. One passenger received a superficial bullet wound in a scuffle in which three women tried to disarm the hijacker.

Matilde Fraga de Parada, one of the passengers released late in the day, said Castro had, in addition to his pistol, a small square can with a button on the top.

"If I touch this button, it will blow up the plane," Castro had said, according to Parada. The hijacker reportedly said if he could not go to Algeria, he wanted to go to Mexico or Cuba.

Doctors admit Biko got poor care

JOHANNESBURG (UPI). — The federal council of the South African Medical Association said for the first time yesterday that Black Consciousness leader Steve Biko received inadequate medical attention before dying in police custody three years ago.

"It appears that the inadequate treatment received by Mr. Biko would probably have been different had the patient not been a detainee under the Security Act," the council said. "The doctors attending Mr. Biko did not appear to have complete clinical independence and this could have contributed to unsatisfactory management."

The Medical Association's statement follows a long controversy over Biko's treatment at Port Elizabeth before he was transferred to Pretoria Central Prison where he died of head injuries.

Funeral rites for Amalrik tomorrow

MADRID (AP). — The body of Andrei Amalrik, the exiled Soviet dissident killed in an auto crash on the way to the Madrid European Security Conference, was brought to the Spanish capital yesterday, and will be cremated in Spain tomorrow after a memorial service.

Dozens of other dissidents, also in Madrid for the conference, began planning public and private tributes for the 42-year-old playwright and historian. Human rights groups reported they were flooded with telegrams of condolence from all over the world.

Amalrik's wife Guyzel claimed her husband's body at a hospital in the town of Guadalajara late Wednesday night, 24 hours after the car he was driving collided with a truck.

Cholera reported in Johannesburg area

JOHANNESBURG (UPI). — Medical officials said yesterday the cholera outbreak in the northeastern region has spread to the heavily populated Johannesburg area.

They said one young black girl has died and four other people living with her contracted the disease in a farm community near the city. Since the outbreak of the disease a month ago, doctors have identified 298 cases of cholera in the eastern Transvaal and Natal. Of the victims, four have died.

Voyager I begins long journey to the stars

Saturn's secrets astound space scientists

PASADENA, California (AP). — Voyager I soared past Saturn's banded yellow cloud-tops on Wednesday, buzzed about a half-dozen cratered, frozen moons and shocked scientists by revealing a bizarre "braided" ringlet within the planet's shining rings. It then began a long, lonely journey towards the stars.

"The results have been just absolutely astounding," said Bradford Smith, head of the Voyager camera team. "We're seeing new things so remote from our experience that we're not able to come up with even a hint of a suggestion as to what some of them are."

The fast-paced tour of Saturn's exotic realm climaxed an exploratory voyage of 38 months and 2 billion kilometres.

The robot spaceship made its closest approach to Saturn — about 123,200 km from the planet — at 11:46 GMT, but radio signals announcing the successful passage needed an hour and 25 minutes to cover the 1.5 million km. from Saturn to the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here.

Sailing beneath the famous rings, where Voyager already had revealed puzzling complexity, the ship found two narrow ringlets that almost appear entwined like crude braids. "It boggles the mind that that even exists," Smith said. He said scientists could not explain the strange structure which was discovered in the narrow, outer ribbon, called the F ring.

Voyager showed Earthbound scientists complex motions within the softly coloured clouds that are Saturn's only surface. As the planet grew before Voyager's cam the washed-out yellowish s displayed ribbons and swirls, and spots where winds playe the haze-covered atmosphere

SADAT REBUFFS REAGAN

"I can't judge a man before dealing with him," he said when asked whether he had already built up an opinion on the president-elect. Asked whether there has been any communication between them, Sadat said with apparent dissatisfaction, "no, no, nothing, nothing."

Sadat said he wondered "whether anyone" — presumably including Reagan — knew that what is being placed in jeopardy is the flow of oil "and the entire western civilization — not whether King Hussein should be talked to or not."

He said that by emphasizing global concerns he was not "ignoring the focal Palestinian problem or turning my back to it."

"No, I want this problem solved at a three-way summit," Sadat said. He expressed faith that disputes with Israel over the issue would still be settled. "We had grave conflicts in the past but we solved them. Now we have disputes that are just as grave, but we will still settle them."

But in the same breath, Sadat said he did not believe current differences involving autonomy could be settled between him and Premier Menahem Begin unless the U.S. played an active mediator's role.

Sadat denied that he was on bad terms with Begin. "Not true. It's only that we maintain different approaches. He has his own views and I have got mine — but he remains my friend."

"If this is the case, why don't you visit him, especially since it is your turn to call on Israel?" The president was asked.

"I see no reason why I should not go to Israel," Sadat said. "But do you expect me to go there when we (Begin and Sadat) are in such a state of disagreement?"

Question — What is it that your excellency wants from Premier Begin?

Answer — To complement the bilateral peace treaty between Egypt and Israel with the autonomy section in the Camp David accords, which we designed to accomplish a comprehensive Middle East settlement.

Question — Could you give some sort of a breakdown on how this should be done?

Answer — First, the formation of a self-governing authority in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Second, ending the Israeli military occupation as well as the dissolution of the Israel civil administration there. Third, the withdrawal of Israeli troops to defined and agreed locations — the sites of which, I insist, must be negotiated between Israel and Egypt. Fourth, the exercise by the self-governing authority of all affairs concerning the population, except the proclamation of a Palestinian state in contravention to the Camp David agreements. And finally, the repatriation of Palestinian deportees and prisoners to their families.

Question — And what about Jerusalem?

Answer — I made clear that this was a subject for negotiations when I demanded to withdraw the reference to the city in the Camp David accords due to the weakness of the text on the issue. I did so at the last minute to salvage the Camp David agreement. Instead, I forwarded a letter making clear that East Jerusalem remains Arab territory.

The Egyptian president recalled that the autonomy scheme would, in line with the Camp David accords, be an interim arrangement. Following its conclusion, Jordan and the Palestinians would be called in to join negotiations in prelude to determining the future status of the territories.

In the interview, Sadat reasserted that he differed last week with Labour Party chairman Shimon Peres over resolving the West Bank and the Gaza Strip questions within the framework of what has come to be known as "the Jordanian option."

"We see Jordan's role differently. The Labour Party wants to tackle the issue through Jordan, and we want it to be settled with the Palestinians," Sadat said.

"The West Bank will certainly have to have connections with Jordan," he said. "Otherwise how could the territories survive? What channel, other than Jordan, would they have? But this does not mean that the territory should be negotiated as a Jordanian one. Jordan steps in only after implementing the self-governing autonomy in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip."

Sadat said that he was the first to try the "Jordanian option" as early as 1974, when in an Alexandria summit he and Hussein issued a declaration to this effect. "It just proved to be unpractical," Sadat said, expressing fear that Hussein might entertain the revival of the project "just to clown."

Sadat indicated that he suspected Hussein would play around with the scheme and then turn it down, excluding Egypt and leaving it out in the cold in a separate peace with Israel.

"The man is a clown. He is preoccupied in making money in return for nationalistic performances. He is getting [illegible] from Arab states which are also clowning along with him," Sadat said.

The Egyptian leader said that at the 1974 summit with Huss Alexandria, he himself suggested the Jordan Palestinian link to und Israel's fears over the emer of an independent Palestinian

"As a matter of fact, I had pute at the time with Yasser A (chairman of the Palestine L tion Organization)," Sadat di ed. "Arafat wanted me to reco his right to a Palestinian stat I said 'no.' My prime concern recover the occupied territor

Vietnam charges Chinese attacks on four provinces

BANGKOK (Reuter). — Vietnam yesterday charged that Chinese troops had crossed into its territory and clashed with its forces in four border provinces.

The Vietnam News Agency (VNA) said in the week up to Monday, Chinese units crossed the border into the northern provinces of Ha Tuyen, Lang Son, Cao Lang and Hoang Lien Son, firing on Vietnamese villagers and looting their crops.

It also accused China of shelling populated areas in two of these provinces. Hundreds of mortar bombs and artillery shells were fired and a number of civilians were wounded, the agency added.

VNA said that Chinese forces were still occupying parts of the village of Xin Man, despite counter-attacks by Vietnamese troops.

The New China News Agency said Wednesday that Chinese and Vietnamese troops fought an artillery duel on their main border crossing near the Friendship Pass after Vietnam started shelling Chinese territory on November 9.

Euro-Arab dialogue revived

LUXEMBOURG (AP). — Europeans and Arabs yesterday agreed at the end of a two-day meeting, which revived the so-called Euro-Arab dialogue, to explore ways of improving cooperation in all fields.

A two-day meeting of representatives of the European Common Market and the Arab League agreed to hold a meeting at the higher level of foreign ministers next summer to decide on concrete steps in their future closer relations.

The Euro-Arab dialogue started after the first oil crisis in 1973 and was interrupted at Arab request in the spring of last year.

Paul Helminger, secretary of state for foreign affairs of Luxembourg, who headed the Common Market delegation stressed tha Euro-Arab dialogue was no stitute for the Camp David a ment, but an action of its own a at improving consultation and ference.

The Arab delegation, heade Ahmad Sedki al-Dajani, a mer of the Palestine Libera Organization executive commi insisted again on the need fo Common Market to recognize PLO as the sole representativ the Palestinian people. This w be an essential step in the ef towards a just and lasting peac the Middle East, the Arab del tion said in the communique. this was not a condition for hol the ministerial meeting summer, both sides agreed.

Oil was not discussed, ticipants said.

Danish police uncover 'assassination plot'

India: Vacuum at the centre

Francois Lochon-Gamma

'A government that works' ... Bruce Grant, a former Australian high commissioner to India, explains why Indira Gandhi has failed to keep that election pledge.

INDIA IS WAITING for the new Indira Gandhi to emerge. It knows the Mrs. Gandhi: the little girl who seemed to be Joan of Arc, and almost succeeded. But her enemies have been banished and she is still a martyr. What will she do now? The old Mrs. Gandhi was surrounded by men who were as gathered as India itself, old politicians who thought they knew more about politics than she did. They felt the whip of her tongue, the click-click of her fingers, the icy figure, but they had their own schemes. Men like Swaran Singh, Y.B. Chavan and Jagjivan Ram, not to mention Morarji Desai and Charan Singh, all saw themselves from time to time as likely prime ministers.

In some ways, each was more deeply rooted in the country than she was. While Joan listened to her voices, Ram listened to the Untouchables, Chavan to the Maharastrans, Charan Singh to the Jats, Swaran Singh to the armed forces and Morarji to the private sector.

The Nehrus, as a family, have always been detached from the trade, caste and regional politics of India.

Now her opponents are scattered, under a whirlwind of defections that even seasoned observers of Indian politics blush, and she remains at the centre. She never defects. She splits the party and takes the government with her.

MRS. GANDHI is today surrounded by younger and unknown men, brought into politics by her son Sanjay, who is dead. To them she is not some upstart of a girl who grabbed the top job, but Mother Indira, all-knowing, all-powerful, yet somehow remote from their concerns.

Sanjay was a practical young man, a "doer" with a low opinion of intellectuals and, indeed, politics. He grew up among the business class of two economically successful states near Delhi — Punjab and Haryana — and married into a Punjabi family. The friends he brought into politics reflect this background.

So, for a moment, there is a disturbing terrible hesitation in India about anywhere without Mrs. Gandhi's capacity to govern. "They have no alternative" at the centre. She won a great electoral victory last January on the promise of "a government that works," but inflation is now running at around 20 per cent, communal violence has become endemic, industrial production is down, power shortages bring chronic load-shedding in major cities and the parallel economy — black money — is getting stronger.

It is reminiscent of 1974, when Mrs. Gandhi convincingly won the important state election of Uttar Pradesh, only to discover that winning elections no longer convinced anyone. Rioting in Gujarat unnerved the state government and spread to Bihar, and the crusade to topple Mrs. Gandhi began, leading to the Emergency in 1975 and the sinking of her ordeal.

But now there is no Jayaprakash Narayan to lead and no political opposition to respond. Moreover, Mrs. Gandhi has no rivals as colleagues to contend with; no powerful state chief ministers on whom to test her strength. The challenge is not to her leader, but to her ability to govern.

UNEXPECTED, the political society of India is sharpening its wits. "I am for chaos," one woman told, hitching her sari. She had been talking of two possibilities for India: authoritarian law and order on the one hand and, on the other, chaos. "I am for chaos," she repeated.

Conversations like this are not entirely serious in India, especially at this time of the year. The summer is over, the monsoon rains have been good and a watery moon is riding high. A sudden energy takes over the Indian mind from now until March. I protested, but she was firm. "I am for chaos." Maybe she does mean by chaos what I mean — a revolution of the masses of Indian people which would drive us out of the pleasant suburban house we are sitting in? I doubt it. I think she means political chaos, a breakdown of government that would bring in a new generation of politicians, consigning Mrs. Gandhi and her son's friends, as well as the failed warriors of the Janata Party, to the scrap-heap.

She doesn't mean social and economic revolution. Hardly anyone in India means social and economic revolution. Not even the Communists, I am beginning to believe, mean that.

LET US SHIFT the scene to test another current theme of Indian political society — reconciliation.

The subject comes and goes, in conversation in Bombay, New Delhi and Calcutta, like a mosquito in your bedroom. Mrs. Gandhi is indisputably on top. Her political opponents are indisputably in disarray. So what else is there except reconciliation? That is, for us to become reconciled to Mrs. Gandhi, and she to us. Or rather, the other way around. She must make the first move. One or two had gone over to her already and they were scorned.

'She never defects. She splits the party and takes the government with her...'

I put this to a friend close to Mrs. Gandhi. "Reconcile? With whom?" I mention a name and he shows almost uncontainable contempt. "A twister and a toady!" Then follows a detailed account of the unfortunate person's behaviour during the Emergency and the 33-month rule of the Janata Party. I mention another name. "Totally corrupt! A scoundrel!"

A REMARKABLE THING has happened in India, but it has left a deep bitterness. The remarkable thing is that governments have changed peacefully, breaking the drought of one-party rule, showing at least on the surface that a big, poor, archetypal Third World country could solve the problem of succession. India has not been given the respect it deserves for that.

But the bitterness left by the years of imprisonment and counter-imprisonment is powerful. It is personal, of course. And why not? To be snatched up in the middle of the night or beaten or paraded pettily in court is not easily forgotten.

What happened during the Emergency was that the brutality of Indian life which is usually out of sight of political society and beyond the reach of government leaders, touched many lives. The dark side of India, its prejudices, corruption and cruelty, came to the surface, and a glimpse of it left many Indians uneasy. Some of the bitterness, I think, is a residual desire to apportion blame for this. But there is another, deeper reason.

For it is possible that the problem of succession has not, after all, been solved.

WHEN MRS. GANDHI'S husband, Feroze, died in 1960, aged 48, it seemed he may have prepared their two sons for a life outside politics. Rajiv, the elder, became an airline pilot and Sanjay tinkered with cars, being given — in a controversial decision that dogged Mrs. Gandhi in the early 1970s — a licence to make the first all-India people's car, the Maruti (which did not get made).

At the time of the Emergency, Mrs. Gandhi turned to Sanjay, understandably, and he stood by her during her darkest days after defeat in 1977. Eventually, he became a politician in his own right, winning a seat in the Lok Sabha, the lower house of the Indian parliament; which determines the government.

He had come late to politics, but had jumped in at the deep end and had shown he could swim. He was expected to become the next Indian prime minister: the only question was how and when.

His death while stunt-flying last June created an extraordinary political situation.

For a moment, it seemed that the dynastic Nehru line had been irrevocably severed. But in India today, Sanjay dead has become almost as potent as Sanjay living. Projects are launched in his name, factories opened, films made, songs composed.

I saw an exhibition being prepared — a selection from 2,000 photographs of Sanjay. Shown at his grandfather's knee, on his mother's lap, with famous people, at work and play, married, in politics, and, finally, the slow, grief-laden train to Allahabad to scatter his ashes at the sacred confluence of the Yamuna and Ganges rivers.

Rajiv, born in 1944, is two years older than Sanjay and had never, until last June, shown an interest in politics. He was a pilot with Air India, had an Italian-born wife, a quiet disposition and a real liking for his work — except, so his wife used to say, that it kept him away from his family.

Yet it is hard to find anyone in India who does not believe that he will set aside his career and enter, as they say, politics, even when denials are issued in his or his mother's name.

SO BLOOD is thicker than political institutions after all, say Mrs. Gandhi's critics — and those who want India to take the next step after the dramatic electoral reversals of both 1977 and 1980, and establish a serious opposition to contest the next election against her.

The situation is, however, complex, as it was when Sanjay took to politics. The promoters of the sons are not necessarily supporters of the mother, and an additionally comical spectacle is that some politicians stumping the country to draft Rajiv are doing so because they have fallen out with the prime minister.

Also, it is not clear that Rajiv would be able to work easily with Sanjay's people: they are not all his type. Sanjay handled skilfully the coarser elements of politics (like money), and had a ruthless instinct for action. Rajiv, also in at the deep end, has yet to show that he can swim, let alone swim strongly.

There is also the enigma of Indira Gandhi herself. It is obvious that she is fiercely self-protective, a sign of insecurity.

It is true that she does not have a strong mind for policy. It is likely that she wants her place in Indian history preserved by those she trusts. All these facets of her personality and her public life lead her towards Rajiv.

Yet she also believes that the Nehrus stand for something in Indian politics. And they do. It has been her weakness not to transmit these values more widely, but they remain in Indian political society and they are still a link between her and many of her opponents.

They are the values of the "modern state," as her father Jawaharlal Nehru described them in simpler times. Most Indians now realize that the description begs several questions. Nevertheless, in a country as poor as India, intervention of the state on behalf of the weak and unfortunate is the second principle of government action; the first being security.

THE VALUES of the village, which express the age-old wisdom of India, do not offer hope to the disadvantaged and dispossessed.

Indeed, they reflect much that is cruel and prejudiced in Indian society. For health, education and for protection from those more powerful than oneself, the Indian state, with all its recent failures, still offers some hope, especially to women.

As a political leader, Mrs. Gandhi responds to that hope, so that in fighting for the Nehru tradition she is fighting for something more than a family dynasty.

It is a fragile hope, which the lady who wants chaos would probably call a deception, but it remains the major source of legitimacy for Mrs. Gandhi. As André Malraux once said, she represents "the very delicate link between the age-old thought of India and the modern world."

As India becomes a substantial state, industrially and militarily — and this is happening, side by side with the problems of poverty — the need becomes even greater for the human and social objectives of government to remain foremost in the minds of political leaders, as they are in hers.

MRS. GANDHI turns 63 this month. She has had a tempestuous life and, recently, an ordeal by political fire. At times those girlhood dreams of St. Joan must have seemed real. But she has survived, even prospered.

She looks very little different from four years ago, when I last saw her; a little harsher in the face perhaps and more powerful bodily, but still with that gliding swiftness of movement, the tendency to run up steps, the fragile smile.

Some say she has bewitched her country so that no one any longer cares what she does, provided she is there. This may be too pessimistic, but only time — and her as yet unproven ability to govern India — will tell.

Mark Wood reports on the state of the Jewish community in the East Germany

Fight for survival

THE CHARRED ruins of a huge synagogue overshadow the offices of East Berlin's Jewish community. It is a bleak reminder of the days of the Nazis.

Not that its members need much reminding. They are still struggling with the grim legacy of the Holocaust.

Of the 170,000 people who made Berlin one of Europe's biggest and liveliest Jewish centres in the early 1930s, only 5,000 re-assembled in the city in 1945. Since then, the community in the eastern half has steadily dwindled to less than 350.

Local Jewish leader Peter Kirchner says that with many of those already over 80 years old, the figure could be down to 150 in 10 years.

But the community does not look on it if it is dying. In the past three years, it has moved into a newly refurbished synagogue and opened a library to keep Jewish culture alive.

"We've also increased contacts to strengthen the community spirit and are paying a lot of attention to religious education for the 11 children in the group," said Kirchner.

"We're working hard to keep the community alive and I'm sure it can survive."

KIRCHNER, a 45-year-old urologist, evidently has the full backing of East Germany's Communist authorities, who provide substantial aid to the Jews, the only religious group to receive regular state funds.

Survivors of the Holocaust receive a pension of the equivalent of $700 a month — four times the standard rate for the elderly — and the government foots most bills for the upkeep and restoration of Jewish religious facilities and memorials.

Kirchner says that without this money the community could not cope, and he says his problems are relatively minor compared to those of the other six regional Jewish leaders in East Germany.

The biggest headache for the regional heads is the sheer size of the Jewish legacy they have to administer with only a handful of active members.

It includes 130 Jewish cemeteries: Kirchner has to take care of the biggest in Europe, in the East Berlin suburb of Weissensee, which has 114,000 graves.

AS PART of its aid programme, the government is paying the equivalent of $1.1m. to rebuild the cemetery wall.

It is also considering restoring the vast synagogue overlooking the community offices, which was once the central Jewish place of worship and was first ransacked by the Nazis in 1938 and then gutted during wartime bombing raids.

Weissensee has a special emotional significance for the community as it served as a sanctuary for Berlin Jews throughout Nazi rule — it was the only place where they could meet and move about freely.

Despite the mass extermination campaigns throughout Europe, the Nazis never entirely eliminated the Jewish population in their capital. Some 3,000 people — among them Kirchner — survived in Berlin until 1945, one-third of them hiding out with relatives or friends.

"Surprisingly, the Nazis destroyed only one Jewish cemetery and left all the others alone. They also carefully stored confiscated Jewish property, apparently to fill some anti-Semitic propaganda museum at a later date," Kirchner said.

THE NAZIS also never completely crushed Jewish religious practice in Berlin: They allowed one preacher to remain in the city to take care of burials, and he held regular secret religious services right up to the end of the war.

Kirchner says some older members of his community have still not completely overcome the horrors of Hitler's rule and ask that the Jewish newspaper be sent to them under plain cover for fear of their being identified by their neighbours as Jews.

Their fears, he says, are unfounded as there has been practically no evidence of anti-Semitic feeling or activity in East Germany for years.

But despite the Communist government's benevolent and protective attitude, many Jews remain highly critical of its handling of wider Jewish questions.

They say that for years the media and the schools paid little attention to the Nazis' murder of the Jews or the activities of Jewish wartime resistance groups, concentrating instead on the struggle and persecution of Communists.

"I think too little has been done to correct the impression the Jews went to the slaughter like lambs," said Kirchner, adding that there were now signs of a change of attitude.

SOME JEWS are also disturbed by East Germany's fervent anti-Israeli policies: "The media paint an entirely negative picture of Israel, and there is a danger that this could create a new latent anti-Semitism, especially among the young," one of them said.

But the government recently exempted Jewish leaders from the general ban on Western travel, enabling them to break out of their isolation and attend international congresses.

The East Berlin community is also rebuilding its links with the 6,000-strong community in West Berlin, severed since 1953, and hopes that the West Berlin rabbi will soon be able to come across regularly for services.

At present, the East German Jews are supported by the community in Hungary, which sends a rabbi for special occasions, supplies kosher wine and matza, and even sends a butcher regularly to ritually slaughter animals.

But more frequent visits by a rabbi from West Berlin could solve one of Kirchner's biggest worries — East Berlin has been without a rabbi for 15 years.

Religious feeling has declined in the community and only one in ten Jews attends religious services regularly. Kirchner says it is vital to strengthen Jewish faith among the young, on whom the survival of one of the tiniest Jewish communities in Europe depends.

Israel's internal airline is no longer a part of the state bureaucracy, to be milked without scruple, writes the Post's DAVID KRIVINE. It is now a profit-minded business.

EIGHTEEN MONTHS AGO, Arkia, Israel Inland Airlines Ltd., was in the same petrifying situation as El Al today. Costs, particularly fuel, had gone up; sales – with Israel's exit from Sinai – were tumbling. The company was losing IL60m. a year (over IS20m. at today's prices).

People ask themselves whether it is possible to make El Al, if not profitable, at least self-supporting. Well, Arkia has managed to do that, and in a surprisingly short time. In March of this year, when the enterprise passed from public ownership to private hands, it was in the boondocks. Today it is paying its way.

The last chairman before the handover was Ehud Shilo, then director-general of the Transport Ministry, now executive director in Soiel Boneh. Shilo took over when both El Al and Arkia were in trouble. El Al was at the time half-owner of the domestic airline, jointly with Hevrat Ovdim of the Histadrut. It did the managing, and El Al's director-general, Mordechai Ben-Ari, was Arkia's chairman.

In April of last year, the government decided to sever that link. "El Al had its own troubles," Shilo explains. Besides, Arkia, once a small and viable local air company, was now struck with delusions of grandeur. Since the acquisition of Sinai in 1967, its field of operations had broadened. It acquired two BAC 111 jets, and entered the big time. Its aircrews emulated the aircrews of El Al, seeking comparable pay and conditions of employment.

The government is the majority shareholder in El Al and could therefore replace it on Arkia's board without difficulty. Under Shilo's presidency, cuts were made. The two big jets were sold off, and 150 out of a staff of 400 were fired. This major surgery was completed before the airline was put up for auction.

THE COMPANY that bought it was one with which Arkia had been in partnership. This requires some explanation.

Arkia does in the air what Egged does on the ground: it runs, so to speak, a bus service with wings. It also needs taxis. These were supplied by, among others, Kanaf-Arkia, a partnership between Arkia and a group of energetic businessmen led by Arie (Arik) Achmon and David (Dadi) Borovitz.

The Achmon-Borovitz group, reinforced by one or two people with money, bought Arkia for the sum of $1.5m. It should be added, as Achmon elucidates, that the company's debts exceeded its assets by $3m., and those debts became a charge on the new owners. So the true cost of the acquisition was $4.5m.

The two ventures are now one. In the new Arkia, Achmon is president, and Borovitz, senior vice-president. Eight months have passed. Arkia is seemingly out of the woods, supplying the air schedules required and financing its own operations without running to the Treasury for aid.

The pruning of surplus planes and surplus personnel accomplished under the transitional regime before the takeover made it possible to find a buyer, but it did not solve all the buyer's problems. First of all, conditions have continued to deteriorate. Fuel costs continued to rise while fares have gone on dropping.

Says Achmon: "Let us measure from August 1979, when we were negotiating for the purchase. Since that time, operational expenses have more than tripled, an increase of 220 per cent. Our fares have risen by only 132 per cent." (This is slightly less than the rise in the index.)

The price of a ticket is high by Israeli standards, but not by world standards. Phrased another way, short-distance air travel is expensive the world over; small planes take few passengers, but still need an aircrew. Arkia is cheap not in absolute terms, but compared with similar services abroad.

Air Wisconsin charges $130 return for a 177-mile trip between Cleveland and Fort Wayne; Arkia asks $104 for the comparable Tel Aviv-Eilat flight. Chicago-Elkhart (100 miles) costs $112, Jerusalem-Rosh Pina, $50. This, when Air Wisconsin pays 90 cents a gallon for its fuel, and Arkia $1.42.

Disbursing IS702 for a trip to Eilat and back seems a lot all the same, but most people don't pay even that. Achmon again:

"Residents of Eilat, Mitspe Ramon and other development townships that we serve have to pay only 40 per cent of the fare. Another 40 per cent comes from the government. The remaining 20 per cent is on us. Package tours get cuts too. It works out that one in four of our customers pays the full price for his ticket. On the average, we gross four-fifths of our own official fares."

Moreover, the defence authorities, who used in the good days to provide as much as half Arkia's clientele (flying reservists from Lod to Refidim, etc.) are withdrawing their business. In a memorandum to the Knesset Finance Committee, the new owners mention that since they took over in March, military bookings have dropped from 35 to 10 per cent of turnover.

The situation warranted not just an economy drive, but a comprehensive reform of the company's structure — and more than that: a revision of standards, a fundamental change of attitude. Shilo, a strong believer in down-to-earth business methods, puts it colourfully:

"Arkia is stuck with the big-airline image: pilots striding to the transcontinental jet in stylish uniform, escorted by stewardesses. Tickets booked ahead of time at the travel agents. Passengers queuing up for boarding-cards.

"Who needs all this ceremony? For a 60-minute hop on home ground, in a turbo-prop plane, a pilot in lumberjacket and jeans will do. Stewardesses are superfluous. So are reservations: tickets can be sold over the counter at the airport."

Arkia have not gone as far as that, though they are thinking about simplifying ticket sales. But they have reorganized the administration from the bottom up.

"The old Arkia had seven or eight departments," Achmon points out. "We have three. Arkia and Kanaf-Arkia had 27 managers between them, complete with offices and cars and whatnot. The merged company has 12. Some managers handle more than one division. I myself run the company, and head the operations department as well."

HAVING SOLD the two jets, the new management was left with five big, unwieldy Vickers Viscount planes. Two of them are being reconditioned in England.

"These 80-seat airliners, when operational, were travelling half-empty. They are wrong for our market," says Achmon.

He explains that Arkia runs three types of line; the main Tel Aviv-Eilat route; the secondary routes (e.g., Haifa-Eilat, Jerusalem-Eilat, Eilat-Ophira); and the minor routes (e.g., Tel Aviv-Mahanayim, Tel Aviv-Sdom, Beersheba-Eilat).

"For the main route we are replacing the Viscounts with three Dash Sevens, made by De Havilland. They have 54 seats. The first will be delivered next August. For the secondary routes, we have bought three 19-seat Metros, made by Fairchild. On the small routes we are using our nine-seat Chieftain Pipers and Islanders, inherited from Kanaf-Arkia.

"Our plan is to employ smaller carriers and run more frequent services. The old airline had Viscounts leaving Haifa for Eilat once a day during half the week, and twice a day during the other half. Our smaller Metros leave Haifa three times every day — morning, afternoon and evening. Each flight has a respectable complement of passengers."

LABOUR contracts have been made tougher, says Achmon. Aircrews are paid according to output, that is, flying hours, including standby time. Ground staff are classified according to their function, not their "rights." Promotion had formerly gone according to the pazam, or lapse-of-time system. Subordinates often found themselves in a higher grade than their own superiors. That led to bad blood.

"Today the grade goes with the job. We pay a seniority bonus, but that's separate. In fact, we give an extra seniority benefit to old-timers passed over for promotion.

"Before, there were a dozen different allowances, accumulated during repeated bargaining sessions. They were complicated and, if you please, not pensionable. Pensions were based on 30 per cent of the pay actually received. That caused dissatisfaction, too. We have abolished all these allowances. There's salary, and there's expenses. All the salary is pensionable."

The old system of price cuts to all and sundry has been scrapped. Rebates are granted for strictly commercial reasons, or because the government requires them, and pays a subsidy. Credit has been reduced from five months to one; debts are now consolidated, with short-term debts exchanged for long-term obligations.

Cost-cutting is sought all the time. Overhauling a Viscount in an Arkia hanger with the help of Israel Aircraft Industries was found to save $600,000, or half the expense of re-commissioning the plane abroad.

All these changes have improved the company's credit standing. The De Havilland planes on order will cost $25m., including spares. An advance of the whole sum has been made by the Canadian government's Export Development Corporation, for 12 years at 9 per cent interest. The loan is being underwritten not by the government, but by Bank Hapoalim.

MR. ACHMON PUTS A good face on it, but it is hard to believe that his company can pay its way on the local traffic available as Israel shrinks in geographical size. Soon Ophira will be Sharm e-Sheikh again, and out of bounds. Israel is so small that flying does not save all that much time. Egged buses do Jerusalem-Eilat in five hours for IS128 return. The airline does it quicker, but at over five times the price.

Arkia has always cast its gaze further afield. The Dash Seven is capable of reaching Athens, Istanbul and even Vienna. The staff and technicians are able to cope with this extended activity. A wider range of outlets would permit greater flexibility in resource use. How gratifying if between rush-hours on the Eilat run, planes could do a "quickie" to some neighbouring country, airmen say.

After a long period of frustration, the problem has been solved. El Al and Arkia propose to set up a joint charter company. Ownership will be 74 per cent El Al, 26 per cent Arkia. It will benefit from El Al's vast marketing network, and will studiously refrain from duplicating the national airline's scheduled runs.

But how can this new project function when its planes are flown by two different types of aircrew, with different work contracts and different salaries?

The charter company will operate according to the work methods of Arkia, not El Al, Achmon states firmly. Cockpit crews will rate a certain fee per flight, fixed according to objective cost and revenue considerations. El Al and Arkia will supply the crews for these charter flights at the stated fee. What they pay their aircrews is their business.

Another possibility is that aviation personnel will form a voluntary association, which will itself contract to supply the crews, against payment of the fee in question to the association. The advantage for them will be that the more flying they do, the more money they earn. Any costs they eliminate will be to their own financial benefit.

"They'll stay in three-star hotels instead of five-star ones abroad, I bet," Achmon grins.

The charter company will be formed, he says, as soon as El Al achieves its reorganization. "I expect it'll be operational by next summer," he predicts optimistically.

The change is one of mood more than anything else. Arkia is no longer part of the state bureaucracy, to be milked without scruple: It is now a business. The owners are in charge, political parties have no pull. The only way to make money is to earn it; deficits spell bankruptcy.

Achmon adds: "In the public sector, taking risks is dangerous, civil servants avoid it like the plague. We encourage decision-making. Better to do and make a mistake than not to do — we tell our staff that. They like the challenge."

And, he says, problems get solved.

Fruits of myopia

Ronald Reagan faces the formidable task of re-assessing, even reversing, fundamental assumptions of American policy in the Middle East, writes SHMUEL KATZ.

NOBODY NEED doubt president-elect Reagan's benevolent intentions towards Israel. With his realistic understanding of the Soviet Union's expansionist aims, it is sheer common sense for him to see Israel as an integral component of a sane American global strategy.

Reagan inherits a daunting situation. For nearly two decades the USSR has been building up purposefully a potential for global domination. She has spanned the continents and the oceans. Combining an imperialist appetite nurtured over two centuries with an unwavering doctrinal determination to achieve the world-wide victory of socialism over capitalism, she has achieved a commanding posture in areas of major significance to the security of the West: the Middle East and Africa. The director of the Soviet Institute of Africa, Dr. Anatoly Gromyko, was not boasting altogether vainly when he wrote recently (in Moscow's Asia and Africa Today, July-August 1980):

"Lenin's cause lives and triumphs... The enemies of Leninism vainly try to confine it to certain geographical boundaries. There are no such boundaries. It was under the direct influence of the ideas of the great Lenin that the National Liberation Movement in Africa has scored its spectacular victories..."

The principle that has guided Soviet operations, says Gromyko, is Lenin's idea of "proletarian internationalism." It was active in Angola, in Ethiopia and other countries and, says Gromyko, it is "currently in action in Afghanistan."

Whether as a result of her own initiative or by grasping opportunities, the Soviet Union's far-flung and often predominant influence throughout Africa is creeping steadily towards her prime strategic target, the South African republic. Control of South African mineral resources and of the Cape sea-route — for transport of essential raw materials and oil to the West — would place the West at her mercy. Her thrust southward is comparable in strategic significance to her more spectacular progress in the Middle East.

UNLIKE President Carter, Reagan did not need the Soviet aggression in Afghanistan to wake him up to the realities of the Soviet purpose, nor to the grim implications of Moscow's bold military intervention outside of Europe. It is patent, moreover, that beyond Afghanistan, with the Iran "bastion" in shambles, the Middle East assumes more and more the aspect of a soft underbelly for Soviet infiltration and, if need be, aggression.

The Middle Eastern legacy now deposited in Reagan's hands has accumulated primarily and largely through the myopia of the West. Britain's precipitate abandonment of the area "east of Suez" at the end of the Sixties — leaving a vacuum — began the process; but it reflected in fact the growing political and moral flabbiness which has pervaded Western Europe ever since.

At this very moment, a distinct tendency is emerging among nation-members of NATO in Western Europe to renege on undertakings given only some months ago to increase their defence outlays by 4 per cent. These undertakings were given in response to the realization of the growing inferiority of NATO armament capacity compared with that of the Soviet Union. Such a perception of priorities, and of Western solidarity does not presage a happy beginning for Reagan's relations with Western Europe.

Europe, however, was for years given an unfortunate American lead and example. The grand design of "détente" with the USSR (seen by Moscow as a wonderful means of increasing her global military capacity) was largely of American manufacture. A meeting of experts on strategy and on Soviet policy in Brussels in September 1979, was privileged to hear a startling confession by détente's leading exponent. After describing the tremendous recent advance in Soviet strength and the consequent dangers to the West, he said:

"The amazing phenomenon about which historians will ponder is that all this happened without the U.S.'s attempting to make a significant effort to rectify that state of affairs. One reason was that it was not easy to rectify.

"But another reason was the growth of a school of thought to which I myself contributed... which considered that strategic stability was a military asset, and in which the amazing theory developed — that is, historically amazing — that vulnerability contributed to peace and invulnerability contributed to the risks of war... The strategic vulnerability of the United States was seen as a positive asset... It cannot have occurred often in history that it was considered an advantageous military doctrine to make your own country deliberately vulnerable."

The speaker was, of course, Prof. Henry Kissinger, the former Secretary of State.

IT WAS NOT only the U.S. and the West at large that became the victims of the consequences of this amazing doctrine. In its pursuit the Suez Canal was opened in 1975 — and thus tremendous impetus was given to the great Soviet leap forward into Africa, into the Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf area, and to the overturn of the balance of power in the whole region. To achieve the opening of the Suez Canal, Israel had to be pressed into retreating in Sinai; thus began the process of the weakening and the shrinking of Israel, and the c tion of her strategic reach.

The policy of shrinking Isr in itself, however, been a f of U.S. political doctrine in a area: the perceived need to and appease the Arabs. It h pursued vigorously and rel ly; and it remains the leitm Washington's policy to this

We are thus the witness paradox no less grotesque th confessed by Kissinger. Isra only state in the area cap serving as an effective deter Soviet advance towards co Middle East oil, is pres withdraw into the indefensib Armistice lines, where she w reduced to concentrating defence of the bare bones security, where she would h tle value to the West; a vacuum created in the h Eretz Yisrael by her with would be filled by a Sovie Soviet-manipulated presenc this on the very borders of Arabia.

This is no theoretical visi not only European state obsessed by their thirst for their hunger for petrodollar some of them, activated germ of doctrinal anti-Z who demand of Israel th agree to this form of immolation. A close examin State Department formulati ing back to 1948, will rev stark truth. They carry th implication.

It is only fair to the Eu statesmen who recently "guarantees" to an vulnerable and all but emas (if she were to accept thei tion to give up her own belt) to recall that this prospect, too, was first held an American statesm Secretary of State Henry Ki after the Yom Kippur W November 13, 1973).

IF REAGAN'S performanc match his grasp of the challenge, he faces the for task of a considerable re ment, even a reversal, damental assumptions in A policy in the Middle East. T need to the West of a stron requires that she be not we but strengthened; and that first of all, the cessat pressures for shrinki territorially.

It is surely obvious moreo in the geopolitical circum that have arisen, the Arab to eliminate Israel (step by at one blow) conflicts with terests of the Western determined to uphold their and their civilization aga Soviet onslaught. Far from ting the continuance of Ara tion of U.S. policy towards I president committed to the of American power in th and, more closely, to the ment of Soviet expansion make plain to the Saudis, their fellow-Arabs ostensib mitted to the Western cau the U.S. will not countena further weakening of Israel

This is no small part magnitude of the tasks Ronald Reagan as president will no doubt discover — in probably knows already — cannot overcome his proble less he first corrects the blun his predecessors.

Portion of the week: Vayetse, Gen. 28.10 — 32.3. The verse discussed is 30.14

Aphrodisiac mandrake

TORA AND FLORA
Louis I. Rabinowitz

THE PORTION of this week tells how Reuben, the son of Leah, found some duda'im in the field, which he gave to his mother. Both, the context of the narrative which follows, and the name, ("dod" means "love" or "beloved") suggest that the plant referred to has aphrodisiac qualities.

The incident, we are told, took place "during the days of the wheat harvest," which, in Israel, is about the time of Shavuot, and although the incident took place in Mesopotamia, it can be assumed that the agricultural seasons of both countries are roughly similar. "Dudaim" are also mentioned in the Song of Songs, which is richer in references to flora than any other book of the Bible; there the reference is to its fragrance: "the dudaim have given forth their fragrance "(7.14).

Various identifications have been put forward for this plant, but it is generally accepted that it is the mandrake, and probably on the basis of this week's passage, strange legends were woven round it. Josephus (Wars, 7.25) for instance states that the plant has medicinal value, but adds also that it must be uprooted by a black dog which dies immediately afterwards. Immanuel Low, the "father of Biblical Botany" (Die Flora der Juden 4 Vols. 1 states that chemical analy revealed that the fruit of th drake contains narcotic and amount of aphrodisiac m which rouses the sensual d animals that eat it (4.576).

A closer examination biblical narrative, however to suggest that in essence it any aphrodisiac role of ma rather than being based Leah accedes to the reques sister Rachel, still childless, her some of the dudai Reuben had gathered. Ye Leah, and not Rachel, who b pregnant. There is, therefor in a footnote in Prof. Feliks' of the Bible in which he s that the moral of the narra just the opposite to the a one, namely in order to em that conception and birth divine hands, and are uninf by external aids.

Sex rears its ugly head

TELEREVIEW/Philip Gillon

MY COLLEAGUE, Daphne Raz, promised in last Friday's "Media Week" column that we were in for a week of love and marriage, of hearts and flowers. Her forecast turned out to be somewhat inaccurate, since it was lust and illicit love rather than romance that made the screen so interesting for dirty old men.

Television, unlike the cinema, avoids to avoid the anatomical approach to the relationship between male and female, but, throughout the week, sex reared its ugly head with a vengeance.

The Book of Proverbs describes sex, the greatest of all mysteries, in these remarkable lines: "There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not: the way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the midst of the sea; and the way of a man with a maid."

An attempt to unravel one aspect of the mystery came, to my astonishment, in Quincy. This series is usually preoccupied with dead bodies, which, of their nature, can scarcely be considered as sex objects, unless one happens to be a necrophile. Occasionally Jack Klugman, acting Quincy, throws a few lecherous looks at an air hostess to assert his manhood; but generally, sex is not allowed to obtrude on the hunt for killers.

This week was very different. For the sake of those readers who are not keen enough on pathology to stay awake on Friday nights for Quincy's 50 minutes of glory — he starts his autopsies at 11.10 p.m. — I will briefly outline the plot of last week's episode, entitled "A small circle of friends."

A famous footballer dies suddenly; the post-mortem reveals that death was due to natural causes, an aneurysm. But the relentless scalpel of Quincy's Japanese-American assistant also shows that the footballer suffered from a penicillin-resistant strain of gonorrhoea.

As usual, Quincy flies into a panic: he sees the entire population of the U.S. afflicted by this unusual venereal disease, unless he tracks down the origin of the bug. The pursuit of the bug takes him into high places and low, from one sex partner to another, for it seems that sex exchanges have been passing like a chain letter.

I was reminded of the story of the five-year-old, who went to the doctor and asked for an injection of a venereal disease.

"You mean an injection against a venereal disease."

"No. I want to get the disease."

After much argument he explains: "If I have it, I'll give it to the maid. She'll give it to my father. He'll give it to my mother. She'll give it to the lodger. And that's the bastard then after!"

This was the theme of Quincy.

Anyway, those who did not see the film need not be alarmed: Quincy relentlessly finds the links in the chain, incidentally catching a murderer in the process, and so America is saved from a scourge.

In passing, I wonder what Quincy would say about the Dark Ages bill now before the Israel Knesset — nominally the Anatomy and Pathology Amendment Law — which will allow doctors to bury all their mistakes undetected, and will reduce the distressingly high incidence of Israelis living to an unnecessarily ripe old age.

BUT DEATH is another matter: back to sex. The last few episodes of Skag, the series about that repulsive steel-worker, have also had plenty of strong meat.

First of all, his plump daughter got herself impregnated by the scion of a family that considered itself socially far above the correctly despised Skag. When she hinted at marriage, the young man was very uncooperative.

I recalled another story, this one about the old Etonian who found himself in a similar predicament. When the girl said, "If you don't marry me, I'll drown myself," he said admiringly, patting her hand, "That's very sporting of you, my dear."

As if having a daughter needing an abortion were not trouble enough for poor Skag, that devout churchgoer who is supposed to avoid excitement because he suffers from an aerosclerotic condition, his bad-egg son David gets entangled with a callgirl. In his efforts to help his son escape the consequences of his folly, Skag has to go all the way to Atlantic City, where he finds that a once plush hotel to which he took his wife has been turned into a den of sin.

David's working girl is so lovely, charming and talented that she triggered yet another story in my mind, the one about the man who discovers that the stunningly beautiful callgirl, who has just collected her fee from him for services rendered, is a Ph.D. from Vassar.

"How did a girl like you, with your background and accomplishments, become a callgirl?"

"I guess I was just born lucky."

MORE SEX. We had another episode of that low-class American divorcee — what was her name again? Something beginning with a W — enmeshing the poor Prince of Wales in her loathsome coils.

Americans may think of this as a sort of Primmer of Zenda love story, but anybody born in Great Britain or the Dominions knows better. I remember, when I was a little boy, waving my little Union Jack in ecstasy as I waited along with hundreds of thousands of other spectators lining the streets of Johannesburg, to catch a glimpse of that royal, almost divine, personage. And here we had him hooked by a commoner, even worse, a Yank, and worst of all, not even a virgin.

A royal family is a royal family. Although I have put my scheme to turn Israel into a monarchy, with myself as king, into cold storage, I have by no means abandoned the project. I hereby solemnly covenant that no member of the royal house will be allowed to marry a mere commoner, although a little adultery à la Edward VII will be permitted.

Incidentally, I think that the casting in this serial is very bad: the Prince of Wales was actually very debonair, very like Rex Harrison, and did not seem to be the pompous ass he is here made out to have been.

In Ingmar Bergman's Scenes from a Marriage, that incredible and regal Norwegian, Liv Ullmann, has for several weeks been lifting sex on to a plane that few can ever hope to attain, some people have complained about this serial that a lot of talking goes on in bed, in an incomprehensible language; but I suppose this is an inevitable development during the long Scandinavian nights.

Only Benson kept sex on a lofty, pure level, falling romantically in love with a tall and stately senator, eminently suitable to become his bride — she was even the right colour.

But she turned down his honourable proposal of marriage, on the ground that marriage did not enter into her plans. Career girls can be tough. Still, Benson's loss is the governor's gain. And ours too.

I HUMBLY apologize to Yaacov Ahimeir and the rest of his team for saying last week that I saw his first report of the American elections at 9 a.m. In fact, my wits were befuddled by seeing it over and over again: 9 a.m. was the scheduled time, but in fact they were rushed on to the screen at 7.30. All honour to them for turning out so good a coverage at such short notice.

Yaacov phoned me to admit that I was right when I complained that the report had been repeated too often; but he explained why that had happened. They were due to get a wonderful package of new items from America by satellite by 8 p.m. The satellite failed to deliver.

That's the trouble with these modern contraptions: they're all right when they work, but impossible when they don't.

THE COVERAGE of the basketball game against Panathinaikos was as disgraceful as were the incidents that were so poorly covered — the punches delivered by Motti Arouesti and Earl Williams.

That the camera missed the Arouesti crack at Vidas may not have been the cameraman's fault; but there can be no excuse for the failure to tell us what had happened, and to comment critically on the Tel Avivian's behaviour.

The camera did catch the foul on Earl Williams, and his vicious right hook to the jaw of Kokolakis, reminiscent of a Joe Louis punch to the jaw of Max Schmelling. We were shown Williams sitting down and saying, "It was a flagrant foul."

But there was no commentary, and there were no interviews with Arouesti, Williams, either of the coaches, or any of the Greeks.

When Williams and Aulcie Perry got into a fracas with Hapoel Tel Aviv players last season, I defended them. But these incidents were quite different. Personally, I think that the International Basketball Federation (FIBA) is to be commended for punishing the wrongdoers.

But that is another story. What has to be explained is why the television team did not deal more adequately with what happened. When such dramatic incidents occur, they should become the centrepieces of the coverage, instead of being politely suppressed.

Despite the reservations I expressed last week, I must admit that That's My Secret was extremely good this Tuesday, with the three members of the team breaking records for getting the right answers. All the items were very interesting, and I enjoyed Tuvia Tsafrir's act as an acrobat.

But I still have a grievance. They could at least have changed the backgrounds, the old pictures and the graphics and the layout, so that the show should not have such a tired appearance.

Painful portrait

CURTAIN CALL/Marsha Pomerantz

OUTSIDE the Jerusalem Khan one afternoon this week, Arab workers in chequered keffiyas made their way to the Hebron Road, as usual, to catch an afternoon bus home. Inside the Khan rehearsals were in progress for a play that had something to do with them. Not usual at all.

Hasut ("Shelter") is about Jews, Israeli Arabs and West Bank Arabs, and the chequered relations between them. To put it mildly. The play, based on a book by Sami Michael and adapted and directed by Ilan Ronnen, opens unofficially tomorrow night.

The situation the play presents could hardly be more ironic — or painful. The date is October 6, 1973. The place, Haifa. Shula's (Rachel Hefler) husband Marduch, an Iraqi Jew, has just gone off to the war. The two are members of "The Organization," which can be understood as Rakah, the Communist Party.

Tuvia (Avinoam Mor-Haim), the nudnick neighbour, intrudes frequently in his attempts to help Shula and her son, though he thoroughly disapproves of her politics.

Shula receives a visit from Shoshana and her Arab husband, Fuad (Aliza Rosen, Victor Attar), who are also members of the Organization. The doorbell rings again, and in walks Fat'he (Aharon Almog), an Arab poet, with his battered suitcase. He's expecting "preventive arrest" and the Organization wants him to hide out in the home of a Jewish colleague.

Shula hesitates, but takes him in. The ironies are off and running.

Everyone listens avidly to the radio, but Arabs and Jews tune in to different stations and don't necessarily hope for the same news. Marduch, who has good Arab friends in Haifa, has gone off to kill Egyptians in Sinai. Shoshana and Fuad's children have split along the ethnic rift: one son is calling his mother "the Jew."

Fat'he is eating at Marduch's table and wondering how many tanks and guns a poet is worth. He hopes that when the Arab armies liberate Palestine, Marduch will emerge unscathed.

In a flashback, Fat'he recalls a visit to Jenin, in the West Bank, where Arabs assume he is a Jew, and a good friend berates him for continuing to live under an Israeli government.

THE PLAY offers much talk and little action. Each of the characters addresses the absent Marduch, telling a part of the story, then slips into the dramatization of the incident. It could have fallen flat, had the subject been less riveting.

For the most part, the acting is very good, and helps carry what is basically a narrative. Unfortunately, the leading lady is weak. At least in the rehearsal I saw, she kept smoothing her floppy hair back in an unconvincing gesture of despair. I wanted to give her a hairband and be done with it.

The ironies this play is about don't stay put on the stage.

WHILE WE were waiting for the rehearsal to begin, I spoke to Victor Attar (Fuad). He has a moustache and an ebbing shock of bushy hair. His ayin and het in Hebrew issue authentically from the vicinity of his Adam's apple.

I asked him what it's like to play an Arab, expecting him to shed some light on the Middle East conflict. He thought a moment.

"It's like playing a Japanese," he said. Attar is the wood-cutter in the Khan production of Rashomon.

The conversation meandered. But a young woman nearby — a South American immigrant, I guessed from her slight accent — seemed interested in picking up the thread.

"So what's it like to play an Arab?" she asked Attar, smiling.

"What is it to be human?" he responded with mock drama.

"Ah, the human condition," somebody sighed.

The "South American immigrant" turned out to be an Arab student at the Hebrew University's drama department. She sat next to me during the rehearsal, and explained that she was doing a paper on Hasut. And by the way, did I know any journalists who were interested in Arabic lessons?

ATTAR talked about his experiences with La Mama in Tel Aviv and New York, commented on Hasut, and then said,

"The man I play exists. He's a newspaper editor in Haifa, but I've never met him."

The journalist model for Fuad either can't come to see the play in Jerusalem, or doesn't want to. For one thing, he has been confined to Haifa by security officials, presumably because of his political activities.

Also, Attar said, there was talk of the real man being dissatisfied with the way the character is drawn.

Attar advised me to ask director Ronnen, or Suheil Haddad, a young Arab actor who works with the Khan group and plays a few minor roles in Hasut.

When Haddad emerged from the staff lounge, I asked him about the original "Fuad": Can't he come to the play? Or won't he?

"I can't answer that," he said, sitting down with a glass of tea. He looked tired. "I could guess, though."

Well?

"But I don't want to guess."

HADDAD apologized for his exhaustion. The cast had been working all week from about 9 a.m. to midnight. Besides all that, he was looking for an apartment to rent. Perhaps I knew of something in the area of the Khan?

The conversation turned to the price of housing, the price of fuel, the relative merits of various heating stoves. Aliza Rosen delivered an impassioned attack against people who spend their money on stylish boots and coats and skimp on home heating.

Then it was rehearsal time.

AT THE END of Hasut, Fat'he hears on the Voice of Cairo that the Arab armies are winning. He packs his battered suitcase again, to move to his friends in Jenin. He invites Shula and her son to come with him, certain that his friends will offer her shelter.

Perhaps the human condition in the Middle East is no more absurd then the human condition anywhere else. But this play will make you wonder. Please see it.

A 'RARE FILM'

BETWEEN ACTS/Joan Borsten

SAN FRANCISCO film critics were unanimous in their praise of Hide and Seek, Dan Wohlman's fifth and latest film, which was shown at the California city's recent film festival. The San Francisco Chronicle described it as "one of those rare films — like Truffaut's 400 Coups — that eloquently shows the traumas of childhood, but in Hide and Seek something of the trauma of the birth of a nation, as well.

Set in Jerusalem, in the tense period just before the end of the British Mandate, the movie tells the story of 12-year-old Uri and his tutor Balaban. Reviewer Judy Stone considered the Wohlman effort an outstanding example of Israeli cinema — "a desire to show the high cost in human terms of living in a military state." She lauded the film's "graceful simplicity and subtlety" something, she says, she has not seen in other Israeli movies.

The film will premiere in Israel next month.

ISRAEL'S ENTRY in the 1980 Best Foreign Film at the Academy Awards will be Michal Bat-Adam's Borderline. The story of how a nine-year-old girl (Liat Pinski) relates to her unstable mother (Gila Almagor) and father (Alex Peleg) is Bat-Adam's second directorial effort. It is scheduled to open here in the near future.

YOSSI BANAI has written, and will direct, the satirical Gashash Hahiver's new movie, Picnic. Shooting begins next March. Banai also has a new show, Me, Simon, and Little Moise, of songs, skits, satire and ditties, which goes on tour from November 20th. If you're in a nostalgic mood and feeling nationalistic and Zionistic, this should be just what the doctor ordered. Material was written by Banai, Naomi Shemer, David Krivoshe, Yair Rosenblum, Mati Caspi, Hanan Yovel, Nissim Aloni, Amos Kenan, Muni Amarillio, Oded Lehrer, and Shimon Bar.

FROM HOLLYWOOD we hear that rock star Neil Diamond will make his film debut soon as another American Jewish singer, Al Jolson. Diamond, who wrote the Jazz Singer script, just finished cutting the sound track.

He's been working on the project, "a lifetime dream come true," for three years. "More really," he recently told the film industry's trade paper, Daily Variety. I've been following Jolson around since I did my imitation of him in the third grade. This movie is today, even though I wear a Yarmulka for the first half. I even taught Lord (Lawrence) Olivier some Yiddish which he used in the film."

Variety also reports that actor Rod Steiger, who earlier this week emceed a Simon Wiesenthal Humanitarian Awards Dinner honouring actress Elizabeth Taylor, has offered to do a picture about the famous Nazi hunter. Steiger is just back from New York where he plays the hasidic rabbi in Ely Landau's The Chosen. Steiger, who admits being a "wayward agnostic," wears a chest-length beard in the role.

"It's the first thing of dignity and maturity I've done in a long time," he says. The other film in which he played a Jew was The Pawnbroker, which he describes as "the best thing I've ever done."

WITH NBC'S Holocaust and — several weeks ago — CBS's Playing for Time scoring high in the ratings, the networks are signalling full speed ahead for other specials about Nazis and their victims.

Arch of Triumph, based on Erich Maria Remarque's novel about an escapee from Nazi Germany living illegally in France, began production last month in Paris. The film is being directed by Daniel Mann, who previously did Playing for Time and stars Maximillian Schell, Suzanne Pleshette and Trevor Howard.

Time-Life has completed James O'Donnell's The Bunker, which chronicles the events in Hitler's hideout during the final days of the Third Reich. Also filmed in Paris, it stars Anthony Hopkins as Hitler and Susan Blakely as Eva Braun.

ABC-TV is readying a six-hour mini-series based on Inside the Third Reich with most of the proceeds earmarked for the UJA. And NBC will this season air a new version of The Diary of Anne Frank, starring Melissa Gilbert, Joan Plowright and Maximillian Schell.

MEXICO CITY'S English-language newspaper, The News, recently reported that Omar Sharif is urging tourists to boycott Israel until the Palestinian autonomy issue is settled. Fortunately, the Egyptians involved in travel seem to be ignoring their most famous export. The three dozen travel agents and hotel and airline representatives who visited Israel last week under the auspices of VIP-Emeco, were much impressed with Israel and indicated we can expect the number of bona-fide Egyptian tourists coming here to increase. And several expressed an interest in encouraging more cultural exchanges between the two countries. One Cairene wants to import for local children the Israel Ballet's new version of Peter and the Wolf — translated into Arabic, of course.

BANK OF ISRAEL

Proposals for the purchase and/or rental of an office block

The Bank of Israel announces its intention of vacating the office block that it occupies in Rehov Yafo, corner of Rehov Sarag, Jerusalem (Binyan Mitzpah), and invites offers for the purchase and or rental of the building and the parts thereof, as detailed below:

Description of the Property

The office block contains a basement floor with storerooms, built in safes and a ground floor, above which are constructed four floors.

Three floors and the basement are occupied under a protected rental and are offered for key money. The top floor is owned by the Bank of Israel and its sale will be undertaken together with the other parts of the building or separately.

Proposals should specify the price offered for each part of the property separately and whether the proposer wishes to acquire rights only in the whole building, or in a part thereof.

With proposals and for particulars: Please apply to the office of Adv. Uzi Ataron, 97 Rehov Yafo, Clal Centre, Jerusalem, 94105. Tel. 02-231804, 02-243650 P.O.B. 2116, Jerusalem 91020.

To view the premises, please apply to Mr M. Kamer, Bank of Israel, Jerusalem.

This notice is not to be construed as a proposal for a contract but only as an invitation to make an offer and is not to be understood as a tender for sale but as an invitation for offers to serve as a basis for negotiations.

A HEALING OF THE NATIONS

AMONG THOUSANDS of Christians who come to Israel each year, many express their solidarity with efforts to make this country green, and their admiration for what has already been accomplished, with trees planted by fellow Christians, around Jerusalem or in Galilee.

It is well-known that many trees along the slopes of the Judean hills around Yad Vashem were planted to bear witness to the heroic efforts of those Gentiles who helped Jews during World War II. There is truly a healing in nature. Mere words cannot replace such a simple act of brotherhood.

And so Christians are beginning to appreciate this unusual type of living moment which is special to Israel. More and more, instead of building in stone and mortar, they plant gardens, such as the two we mention here.

Seven trees were planted in the Segev forest in Lower Galilee at the end of August, 1980. This forest is dedicated to the memory of Italian Jews, but these new trees will honor a Gentile, one of the Righteous among the Nations.

Dr. Cornelius A. Rijk, a Dutch Catholic priest who died on August 29, 1979 at the age of 57, would probably have chosen such a memorial above all others. It symbolizes his great love for the land of Israel and its people, and bears witness to his all-consuming passion for improving relations between Christians and Jews.

IN THE WORDS of one of his closest friends and colleagues, Prof. Manfred Vogel of Northwestern University, "It is no exaggeration to say that the Jewish-Christian dialogue came to constitute the very heart and essence of Father Rijk's life. It became his vocation and mission in life to which literally every moment of his awakened conscious life was devoted."

After teaching Biblical Studies in the seminary at Warmond, Holland, Father Rijk went to Rome to become director of the newly established Vatican office which deals with relations with the Jewish people. Vatican II "opened the doors" of the Catholic Church to new dimensions of thought and activity and Father Rijk threw himself into this new spirit with all his energies and considerable talents.

He also became director of the new SIDIC organization (Service de Documentation Judéo-Chrétienne) run by the Sisters of Zion, whose aim is to encourage efforts to implement the Vatican Council decree on the Catholic Church's relations with Judaism.

CHRISTIAN COMMENT
Oikoumenikos

Father Rijk initiated courses in Judaism and in the Biblical roots of Christianity in the different international colleges in Rome, prepared groups for an in depth pilgrimage to Israel and travelled from Australia to America giving lectures, as well as helping to make SIDIC, a unique centre of Jewish-Christian dialogue for the Italian and international community in Rome.

At Segev in August, friends and collegues from Israel, France, England and Italy, and from various interfaith organizations in Israel and abroad paid tribute to Cornelius Rijk and to the dynamic and effective way in which he fulfilled his mission of "healing the Nations."

ON SEPTEMBER 26, 1980 an Ecumenical Prayer Garden was officially opened on the Mount of Olives. Finally, after centuries of distrust and conflict, Jerusalem Christians can gather facing the age-old walls of Jerusalem and pray, free from the barriers of denominational intolerance.

No church will stand on the spot, no gate will ever be closed; only a landscaped garden of several ancient olive trees surrounded by a low stone wall gives the site a feeling of timelessness and quiet. The opening of the prayer garden was the culmination of the untiring efforts of Etienne Boegner, who worked for 10 years to fulfil a dream of his father's.

During a historic meeting between the late Pastor Max Boegner of the Eglise Reformé de France (President of the World Council of Churches in Geneva 1949-1961) and the late Pope Paul VI, both expressed a strong desire to establish a garden in Jerusalem, the city of peace, where, simply through quiet reflection and prayer, walls would gradually be broken down and all men would find a harmonious way to the Fa

Representatives of diff Christian communities Jerusalem attended the inau tion, along with many distingu visitors affiliated with major tian groups. The Vatican, the Council of Churches, and Archbishop of Canterbury representatives.

To conclude the celebratio magnificent Bach concert offered by the well-known vio Henryk Szeryng, accompani Ruth Mense on the organ, Basilica of St. Stephen on N Road.

Anyone who goes to the will be reminded of its purpo the plaque on the wall which in part, "We dedicate this gar the glory of God, to be a pla prayer and spiri refreshment...In passionate for righteousness and peace f mankind."

Sweden and Israel plan pact on pension rights

Sweden and Israel will begin negotiations for a "social treaty" to insure pension rights for citizens from each country residing in the other country, it was decided yesterday.

Visiting Swedish Minister of Health and Social Affairs Karin Soder and Labour and Social Affairs Minister Israel Katz agreed that the negotiations for the treaty will begin next April. Israel already has similar agreements with West Germany, Austria, England and Switzerland, and negotiations are underway with the U.S. for such a treaty.

The Swedish minister arrived on Tuesday night for a five-day working visit, including visits to several Israeli social welfare projects. Among the projects are an alcoholic rehabilitation centre in Jerusalem, a home for mentally disturbed children, Kibbutz Shefayim, and a home for unwed mothers.

At a press conference yesterday after the first working session between Katz and Soder, the Swedish minister said a key item for possible joint projects is how both countries deal with alcoholism and drug addiction.

An international symposium on drug addiction is slated for Jerusalem later this month.

Soder admitted that Sweden's problems in the field are "far greater" than Israel's, but she indicated that both countries could learn from each other on the issue.

Soder, who served as her Centre Party government's foreign minister between 1976 and 1978, controls some 25 per cent of her country's state budget. She is responsible for health, housing, education and welfare services.

Swedish Minister of Health and Social Affairs Karin Soder confers yesterday with Labour and Social Affairs Minister Israel Katz.

She said that Sweden, which buys almost all its oil from neighbouring Norway, is considering removing the oil factor from the index that determines pensions and welfare. She said her ministry's policy is to provide massive compensation for the poorest echelons of society. Sweden's inflation rate is 15 per cent a year, she added.

Katz warned reporters not to draw too many comparisons with Sweden, pointing out that the Scandinavian country does not spend 30 per cent of its budget on defence and does not have to pay international spot prices for oil. He also indicated that removing the oil factor from the index in Israel would not help the poor.

Like Israel, Sweden's growth rate has slowed down, and according to the visitor, efforts are under way to trim the social affairs budget. But she emphasized that it is not policy to cut the budget, but rather to "slow down the increases in benefits."

When the minister commented that Swedish taxpayers pay the highest rates in the world, Katz corrected her, saying Israelis pay higher taxes.

She went on to say that while Swedes are not happy about their taxes, the complaints seem more related to the "complexity" of the tax structure than the burden itself.

High taxes "are the price you pay for welfare," she said, adding that she feels that Swedes "appreciate" the benefits derived from a costly welfare state.

On foreign issues, Soder said that she is visiting Jerusalem as "a social affairs minister and not as a foreign minister." She emphasized Sweden's policy of neutrality.

There is great interest in Israel in Sweden, but "I'll add that the interest is also in the entire region," she said.

"We all agree (in Sweden), that we want a peaceful and stable situation in this part of the world," said Soder.

Concerning former prime minister Olaf Palme's attempts to mediate a cease-fire in the Persian Gulf war, Soder said that the Swedish foreign ministry had officially "wished him luck." She said that she was not surprised by his efforts since he is a "well-known international politician."

Once Dr. Hedi Frankfurter of Jerusalem turns up with her two handsome dolls, we know that The Jerusalem Post Toy Fund is well on its way. Now in her 80's Dr. Frankfurther has been making this splendid contribution for years. Her dolls each have a wonderful wardrobe, all made by hand — they even have warm panties — and are dearly loved by the children at a kindergarten for the handicapped.

THE JERUSALEM POST HANUKKA לילדים TOY FUND

Not only are they loved, but they are now part of the programme of this particular kindergarten. The children learn how to dress while taking care of their dolls.

We have a young giver on today's list — a seven-year-old just beginning to read a bit of English. His eye caught the Toy Fund advertisement and as he made his way through it, he was stumped by the word "donation." When his father explained, Nadav Street declared he would be a donor too and asked his father to turn over IS10. This one's heart is surely in the right place.

Profit-takers reap their gains

By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Profit-taking, especially in those issues which have had the sharpest gains in recent sessions, surfaced yesterday in various sectors of the stock market. Surprisingly, even some commercial bank shares were affected. Trading volume was moderately active and crossed the IS92m. mark.

Index-linked bonds were mostly unchanged, although the 80 per cent linked issues were ahead by as much as 2 per cent.

The shekel was in good form as it traded the dollar to a standstill and the exchange rate remained unchanged.

Among commercial bank issues Discount Bank lost 22 points. Union Bank dropped 13 points. United Mizrahi was relatively hard hit and lost 50 points, a 6 per cent loss. Bank Hapoalim, Bank Leumi and General Mortgage Bank, were unchanged. Maritime 0.1 lost 5.7 per cent while Danot 5.0 was a heavy loser with a fall in price of 8.5 per cent. FIBI eased by 20 points, mostly mixed and traded within Mortgage bank equities were a relatively narrow margin. Carmel R, however, lost a full 5 per cent.

Insurance issues traded at lower levels. A notable exception was Ararat, whose 0.1 shares zoomed ahead by 15.2 per cent and 0.5 shares gained 5.1 per cent.

Supersol options came to the market and traded unchanged at 1149.

Land development and real estate equities were mostly lower. Caesarea, a recent market favourite, was unchanged. Ispro was buyers only while others in the group declined by 3-4 per cent.

Industrials trended lower. Urdan shares were lower by as much as 7.4 per cent. Cables and Moler gained about 5 per cent respectively. Argaman B was down by nearly 7 per cent. Ta'al was the biggest loser in the group as the company's registered shares fell by a full 10 per cent.

Israel Petrochemicals, whose shares scored major gains this month, tumbled for an 80-point loss.

New York Stock Exchange

The New York Stock Market continued to score sharp gains yesterday. The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 982.25, up 17.32 on the day. Indications that interest rates have peaked has been a primary reason for market strength. Volume was 69 million shares, up from 58.5 million the previous day. Gaining issues outnumbered declines by more than 2 to 1. Among the actively traded issues IBM closed at 71¼ (+2⅝). Boeing 39⅞ (+⅜), LTV 18⅜ (+1⅛), Amerada Hess 48¼ (+2⅜), J.P. Morgan 46¼ (+1), Cities Service 31½ (+2½) and Central Southwest 13 (+¼).

Begin scrambles the eggs

SINCE THERE was from the start little chance that Mr. Begin would, for all his pains, get to see President-elect Ronald Reagan himself this week, the only good purpose to which the premier could have put his current visit to the U.S. was to promote Israel's public relations. This he has indeed done, but in somewhat peculiar fashion.

On the face of it, Mr. Begin flew to America last Sunday to help celebrate the 100th anniversary of the birth of Ze'ev Jabotinsky — or, in plainer words, to install the late Revisionist leader, who had not lived to see the rise of the Jewish State, more firmly than ever in Israel's national pantheon.

However, the huge audience at the New York commemorative dinner on Tuesday had no reason to be displeased: they had, in any case, come not so much to applaud Ze'ev Jabotinsky as to honour the prime minister of Israel. But they must have been well enough informed about their own country to be able to pass judgment on Mr. Begin's attempt also to establish a new pantheon of Israel's friends in America.

From Mr. Begin's point of view, the award of 100 Jabotinsky medals to worthy Americans was, among other things, an occasion to make up for the neglect of the Reagan camp by the premier's own government during the last election campaign. This in itself was unexceptionable.

But someone in the Prime Minister's Office, or in the Israel Embassy in Washington, decided to include in that roll of honour one of the most controversial figures in America today — Rev. Jerry Falwell, a leader of the "Moral Majority," which is the main religious wing of the so-called New Right.

Besides being a hearty supporter of Mr. Reagan, and a backer of Israel, Mr. Falwell is an inveterate enemy of "communists, pinkos and liberals," or more specifically of the Eastern Liberal Establishment, which is often synonymous with Jews. His "Moral Majority" troops engineered the defeat earlier this month of Senator Frank Church, Democrat of Idaho, partly on charges that he had been using outside "Jewish" money.

Senator Church, one of Israel's best friends for years on Capitol Hill, was understandably not very amused when he, too, was invited to accept a Jabotinsky medal. He turned the invitation down. So did New York's Democratic mayor, Edward Koch, and for the same reason. New York's Democratic Senator Daniel P. Moynihan also kept away, presumably also in protest against the award to Mr. Falwell. It is reasonable to assume that the sentiment was shared by some of those who did attend the dinner, and even took their awards.

The moral is not that Israel should ostracize Mr. Falwell, but that walking both sides of a street is a tricky business, even for the prime minister of Israel.

Where oil is not to blame

THE NINE per cent reduction in the country's trade gap during the first ten months of the year is by all odds a noteworthy achievement, which takes on special significance when viewed against the background of continuing rises in the "OPEC oil tax."

This economic feat carries a price tag, however, and the question is whether the price is justified in terms of profit to the economy as a whole.

Gideon Patt, the minister of commerce and industry, presumably speaking for his entire constituency, believes the question must not even be posed. Last Wednesday he lashed out at Arnon Gafny, the governor of the central bank, for suggesting that exports rose high on an unnatural tide of cheap credits — and that the government's subsidies to exports should be drastically cut.

Suddenly, Mr. Patt found Mr. Gafny's advice to have been misguided all along, and more in the nature of instruction than advice.

Now it may readily be granted that Governor Gafny's advice to the government has not always been wise, or only belatedly so. But the logic of the governor's position on export subsidies is unassailable. Exports are themselves inflationary; massive export subsidies massively stimulate inflation, and the present formula, which allows inflation to progressively raise the real rate of subsidy, gives manufacturers a stake in growing inflation.

Today, as a result of the official policy, 58.7 per cent of the entire volume of credits in the economy is channelled into exports, compared with 52 per cent last year, 45 per cent in 1978 and 23 per cent in 1977. But the main point is that the cheap credits to exports are made possible by government subsidies, which are expected to total more than IS3 billion this year.

This would be double the amount spent for the purpose last year, and ten times the amount spent in 1978. Some of the increase over time is due to the rising volume of exports, but most of it is the product of rising subsidies. Cheap credit, like cheap milk, is in great demand — and there is no ceiling on the supply of cheap credit.

Governor Gafny is to be commended for finally realizing that this just cannot go on, that a slightly smaller trade gap achieved at the cost of much higher inflation is not a practical proposition.

A few months ago the governor, with the support of Finance Minister Yigael Hurvitz, moved in to make a change. He had the system of fixed interest rates on export credits replaced by a sliding scale. Unfortunately, inflation soon wiped out whatever savings might have been obtained by even this minor reform.

Minor though it was, the reform was still opposed by Mr. Patt. This would explain why Mr. Gafny, again with the backing of Mr. Hurvitz, chose not to consult, at the first stage, the minister in charge of commerce and industry about his proposal to thoroughly revamp the subsidy system. Had he got wind of it, Mr. Patt would surely have acted to scuttle the suggested revision before it was even put on the agenda.

Now Mr. Patt is fuming, refusing even to talk to Mr. Gafny, and warning of a plot to dismantle the country's industry.

There is no such plot, but only a courteous nod in the direction of the old liberal idea that industry which cannot subsist without social security assistance, should bow out. Also, there is the beginning of awareness that it is not consumer demand (as Mr. Hurvitz still fancies) but extravagant subsidies to capital that today stoke the furnaces of hyperinflation, the country's worst blight.

A TWO-PRONGED ATTACK

By CHAIM HERZOG

(Israel Sun)

'The spectacle of tyrants condemning tyranny, of racists denouncing racism... has accustomed us to a world in which double-talk has become the order of the day.'

FIVE YEARS AGO this week, the UN General Assembly adopted the infamous calumny that Zionism is a form of racism. That was the first major international attack on the Jewish people since the decline of Nazism.

Spearheaded by the Arabs and radicals in the Third World, and backed by the Communist countries, the attack took on a sinister form as the dividing line between anti-Zionism and anti-Semitism disappeared entirely during the debate, though our enemies tried initially to draw this distinguishing line.

The "Zionist debate" in the UN evoked a tremendous reaction throughout the world. The Arabs saw the result of the vote in the General Assembly as a Pyrrhic victory, and thereafter for a number of years the subject was swept under the carpet in the councils of nations, this in the face of an unequivocal stand taken by the free world, and of a majestic and dignified reaction by the Jewish people. But as soon as Israel's position amongst the nations was seen to be eroded, the forces of anti-Semitism and racial discrimination renewed their efforts.

The Arab attack, backed by the Communists and countries of the Third World, was part of an overall strategy developed by the PLO and many of the Arab delegations at the UN with the purpose of setting in motion a process of delegitimizing Israel in the community of nations. This process had already been initiated in the early '60s by the Soviet Union.

This process reached its climax in the '70s, when the free world was silent in the face of developments, just as it was in the '30s when Hitler levelled his accusations against the Jewish people 40 years ago.

Many in the world may not have fully appreciated the fact that anti-Zionism has now become a polite euphemism for anti-Semitism. It has joined the code-word lexicon that characterizes international hypocrisy today.

THE INTERNATIONAL terror organizations linked to the PLO have not only adopted anti-Semitic slogans but have also become involved in attacks and excesses against Jewish objectives in Europe. The Zionism-Racism Resolution in 1975 was a warning to the free world. It was apparently not heeded. The danger this resolution reflected, because of its implications for democratic society, has not receded. On the contrary, it has become much more emphatic.

Even in Britain — the home of freedom and free speech — Jewish spokesmen were banned from campuses in more than half a dozen universities on the ground that Zionism is a form of racism.

The trend is a most disturbing one. A year ago, in December 1979, a resolution which once again included inter alia the proposition equating Zionism with racism was voted on in the UN. In 1975, 35 countries including all the enlightened democracies in the world voted against the resolution equating Zionism with racism: in 1979, only four countries — the United States, Canada, Australia and Israel — voted against it. In 1975, the European Community voted against it: in 1979, the European Community abstained. In 1975, only two Latin American countries (excluding Cuba) voted for the resolution condemning Zionism, namely Mexico and Brazil. In 1979, only four countries in Latin America abstained. In 1975, fully half the Black African continent refused to go along with the resolution, and five states actually voted against it: in 1979, Black Africa supported the overall resolution.

If we add to this the concentrated attacks in UNESCO; the appearance of Yasser Arafat at its conference; the conversion of the UN Conference on Women in Copenhagen into an anti-Zionist and anti-Jewish orgy; and the fact that the new treaty signed only recently between the Soviet Union and Syria reaffirms the lie about Zionism and racism, and commits both parties to the war against Zionism — one can see the danger signs which only an ostrich-like approach would ignore.

The attacks on the Jewish community in Paris, Germany, Britain and elsewhere; the rise of Nazi forces, however small, in France, Germany, the U.S. and Britain; the universal links of the PLO bent on terror and the destruction of the Jewish people — all of these are the natural corollary of the events I have been describing.

The spectacle of tyrants condemning tyranny, of racists denouncing racism and of members of the Human Rights Commission daily violating the human rights of their own populations has accustomed us to a world in which double-talk has become the order of the day. Indeed, we know from experience that there is nothing more completely aligned than the so-called non-aligned countries, for example Cuba and Vietnam. If a country has the appellation "socialist" in its title, one can be certain that nothing is further removed from the principles of true socialism than the regime of that country.

PARALLEL to the onslaught of the anti-Semitic coalition of Fascists, left-wingers, Communists and Arabs is the spread of "disinformation" in the free world, which is misleading people not only about Israel and our conflict and distorting Israel's image, but also is presenting developments in the Middle East in such a manner as to give rise to gross errors and false political evaluations on issues vitally important to the security of the free world.

Following the outbreak of the Iranian-Iraqi war, Time magazine published an article stating clearly and unequivocally — and quoting U.S. State Department sources in its support — that the United States' failure to move Israel in the autonomy discussions on the West Bank, had weakened the United States' ability to be an influence in the Persian Gulf, and had thus affected the earth-shattering events occuring there.

This was not a single isolated incident. Only a few months ago, while on a visit to Saudi Arabia, Lord Carrington, Britain's Foreign Secretary, linked the problems which Saudi Arabia was experiencing to the lack of any advance on the Palestinian issue. Mr. Vance, the then U.S. Secretary of State, adopted a similar approach. Yet, surely it must be crystal clear to all but the most prejudiced today that if the Israel-Arab conflict is solved by whatever means it might be solved, the great dangers to the peace of the world inherent in the Middle East will persist.

For the alarming frequency with which Western leadership has been caught unawares by events in the Middle East should give rise to very considerable concern in the free world. Three revolutions in Afghanistan, the Soviet invasion of that country, the revolution in Iran, and now the Iran-Iraq war in the Shatt al-Arab, have all caught Western leaders by surprise — and this in an area in which the very lifeline of the whole of the Western economy could be cut by any petty dictator or megalomaniac inclined that way.

To illustrate my point, I have chosen what must be a classic example.

What was on the front page of the London Times less than three weeks ago, on Monday, October 27? Not the Iraqi-Iranian war: that was relegated to page 3, as indeed was the tension in Poland. Not the war in the Western Sahara; that was not mentioned. Not the ongoing struggle in Afghanistan against the Soviet invaders: that was hardly mentioned. Not one of the major conflicts in the Middle East. Indeed, not even the historic visit of President Navon, the first head of the Jewish State to pay an official visit to an Arab country: that was relegated to page 5, with a headline "Quiet Cairo Welcome for President Navon." On the same page 5 was depicted the murder of 450 people in the Jamaican elections.

But on the front page, one of the four top headlines in the Times on that day — the only one dealing with foreign issues — was "Battle of the Sabbath on the Road to Ramot." The stone-throwing escapades of a handful of misguided young zealots throwing stones in an escapade which was back page news in Israel, was highlighted by what claims to be one of the responsible newspapers in the world, as one of the major issues in the world, worthy of the attention of its readership over all the other major issues.

If that is not disinformation, what is?

How is one to explain other phenomena if not a discrimination which is an obsession, and wh hands of those who c mightiest weapon in the is endangering the free which they publish?

An atmosphere has be indicating that the p which we in Israel are the root problem facin world, and that a solut will bring on the onset lennium and bring to prophecy of Isaiah. mosphere, a result of a disinformation, has u played its part in bringin results which we see t streets of Europe: Israe intransigence is see dangering the peace of and at the same time t activities of the PLO a as liberation movemen Terrorists attacking I classified by the BBC as while those attackin targets are called terro

HERE, then, is the twin tack we face. The c problem of the Sov inspired move gra delegitimize Israel, whi various forms in the U now branched out into th Western cities. The se tendency in the West t atmosphere in which the Israel and Jews can ope more effectively.

It is against this bac the twin dangers facing that we have to addres to the challenges facing

READERS' LETTERS

THE GREIVER HOUSE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — Is it possible that the government take over the Greiver house and turn it into a field school for the study of the flora, fauna and agricultural qualities of the area? Or a guest house for underprivileged children for vacations? Or a sick fund clinic? Or a "retreat" for the elderly and infirm where, for a week or so a year, they could be given a taste of the honey our land is famous for? Or any number of other institutions dedicated to the humanitarianism we are also famous for.

The building should not be destroyed; rather it should remain as a reminder to others who may think of breaking the law.

HOCKEY IN JERUSALEM

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — We would like to inform residents of the Jerusalem area that the new hockey season has now started. The Jerusalem Club meets twice a week, Mondays and Wednesdays, at 3:30 p.m. at the Hebrew University Stadium. League matches are played on Saturday mornings.

New members will be very welcome. Experience is not necessary, nor is there any age limit. Anyone wishing further information should contact Inez Pollack, telephone 716310, or just come along to a practice.

TRUE KINDNESS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — Civilization is often measured by its treatment of the weak and helpless. Judaism constantly stressed aid to those who cannot pay back — as the elderly and the dead — as true kindness. Your "Forsake Me Not" fund is a fine example of living Judaism.

I hope the Israel and Rockefeller Museums will follow your example with true kindness to the dead — who are even more helpless — by providing dignified burial to all human remains which they crassly exhibit. It does not honour our people that Sadat should be first with such a proposal with regard to the Egyptian mummies. We should not just talk about it, but do it.

VISITING MEA SHE'ARIM

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — In his letter of October 24 commenting on my report of a visit to Mea She'arim, Morton Lecover implies that I was an indecently dressed woman, as were the other women in the group.

He is wrong: I am a male; our group consisted of about 200 men and women, about half of whom were Orthodox.

Mr. Lecover also writes that Mea She'arim is inhabited by Orthodox Jews. People who support Arafat and Khomeini, wish for the destruction of Israel, stone people on the Sabbath and dress like 17th century Polish Christian nobles do not in any way behave as Jews.
